Dear Mr. Hoover,

I am a free lance writer (as yet unrarried) working on a book which deals in part with the problem of Communism. I have been using your book "Masters Of Deceit" as ~~material~~ an authority and after realizing that a desire for a "Bright New World" motivate many people into joining the Communist party (M.O.D. page 99) I thought I would send you this booklet to serve as recommended literature for the re-habilitation of ex- Communists.

My book in brief, is about an ex-Benedictine Frater who leaves the Monastary after his temperary Vows are expired and is told to sanctify his walk of life, and, because he is an exceptional young man both in intelligence and appearance, he must realize that "All things should tend to God's greater Honor and Glory and therefore 'To Him Whom Must Is Given, Much Is Expected.'" EX- 103 REC- 9 62-104277-2193

The young man is trying to become a golfer ~~to make~~ use of the popularity and publicity to set good example ~~for young people~~ and promote the Benedictine Life and Ideals for people who wish to lead good lives but without Vows. JUL 25 1961

In the course of trying out for the job (he must go to address to familiarize himself with the members and their games) he realizes the golf course is filled with influential people.

He manages to influence these people. A key T.V. executive is, unknown to my main character, a Communist and is converted to Catholicism through the sincerity and aimiability of my protagonist (Tom Corrigan)

The T.V. executive reveals to Tom the strategy etc of the Communists (which I take from your book)

I'm not picking on the T.V. industry nor necessarily implying that any one executive is a Communist but from pure logic Communists want to get in spheres of influence to reach the masses and they want to get in key positions and I certainly wouldn't be surprised if they would want to influence the T.V. industry.

I could have made a ~~member~~ another member the Communist but since the family is the common denominator of the world the best way to destroy the family is by entering the sanctity of the home and so, I want to be particularly interested in removing any Communistic or atheistic influence in T.V.

Also, I touch upon obscenity through a judge who strongly believes that some books that have been cleared as not being obscene are obscene and explains why.

My theory is that Communists want to weaken a man's religious beliefs and taking sex out of marriage and putting it in practically everything else takes a person away from his God and makes him more susceptible to Communism.

If you have any information to support my thinking that Communists are, or have been in T.V., and that they are, or have been, promoting salacious and obscene literature I would greatly appreciate it if you would send me some.

Well, that's it I guess. Let's hope that in the not too distant future Communism will be a thing of the past and true peace will be a thing of the present.

Sincerely,

F381

HOW TO BECOME AN OBLATE

Any Catholic fifteen years of age or over, and not a member of any Third Order, may become an Oblate of St. Benedict. When all the members of a family become Oblates, children under fifteen years of age are counted as candidates until they have reached that age.

To become an Oblate the following steps should be taken:

1. Have the intention to live your daily life as a Christian according to the spirit of the Rule of St. Benedict.

2. Apply to any Benedictine Monastery, or ask any Benedictine Priest for further information.

3. When your application has been accepted, arrange to be invested as an Oblate Novice by the Superior of your Benedictine Monastery or by any Benedictine Priest, or by any other Priest delegated for this purpose. At investiture you will receive the small black scapular of St. Benedict and a medal of St. Benedict. The medal may be worn instead of the scapular.

4. A year and a day after being invested, or as soon thereafter as convenient, you may make your Profession or Final Act of Oblation in the presence of the Superior of the monastery for which you were invested, or in the presence of any Priest delegated by him to receive your profession.

5. You are then an Oblate of St. Benedict for life, and are expected, in view of your Final Act of Oblation, to be a Benedictine to the best of your ability, and according as your state in life permits.

6. While no special prayers are prescribed, it is suggested that Oblates recite some part of the Divine Office daily, or say at least the "Glory be to the Father" seven times a day in keeping with the custom of the monks who sing the praises of God seven times a day in choir.

Oblates should have as their mottoes: "Ut in omnibus glorificetur Deus—That in all things God may be glorified"—and the simple word "Pax—Peace." They aid and assist their monastery by their prayers and in any other way they can, and in turn share both in life and in death all the prayers and good works of the monastery.

While our "Missionary Associates of St. Benedict" enjoy many of the spiritual privileges of Oblates, we would be happy to send explanatory literature concerning Oblates to any of our friends or Associates who might wish to go a step further in identifying themselves with our monastic family at Benet Lake.

Kindly send your request to the:

OBLATES OF ST. BENEDICT

WHAT ARE BENEDICTINE OBLATES?

Some years ago a Priest sent in the following question to the American Ecclesiastical Review: "Is there a Third Order of St. Benedict, to which persons living in the world may be affiliated in the same manner as there are Tertiaries of the Orders of St. Dominic and St. Francis? The Order of St. Benedict, being, it appears, the oldest among the religious congregations making solemn vows, has given its rule to many institutes of religion; and, as such, seems most worthy of Catholic following. Other orders were the outcome of some special need of the times; but the Benedictine Rule was made to answer all the needs met by genuine Christian charity. To the monks of St. Benedict we owe the conversion of Europe to the true Faith" (Vol. 61, No. 4, P. 480).

The question posed by this good Priest gives an accurate picture of present day knowledge of the ancient Order of St. Benedict, in strange contrast to the veneration and love in which the Order was held in the Ages of Faith. If some day research and scholarship will be able to gather enough information to give an accurate picture of the contribution the Benedictine Order has made to Western culture, it will have to place side by side with the great monks the names of countless laymen who by their association with the monasteries carried into the home, the market place, and the political sphere the life-giving principles of Christian living.

WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN OBLATES AND TERTIARIES?

The Institute of Oblates is similar to the various groups of Tertiaries in so far as Oblates are truly Benedictines and enjoy the special favors and indulgences granted by the Church to the entire Order. There is, however, this fundamental difference. The Benedictine Order is built on a family ideal. Each monastery constitutes a family with its own spirit and ideals. When a person becomes a Benedictine Oblate he does not join an Order in the sense that the Tertiary joins say the whole Franciscan Order. He joins one particular monastery, becomes a member of one religious family. For this reason it is desirable to have whole families become Oblates together, so that they may more fully translate the spirit of Christian family life found in the Holy Rule into their own lives. This can be done by having common prayer in which the whole family joins and even a little daily spiritual reading in common from the Bible or some other devotional book. Furthermore the Benedictine Oblate should acquaint himself with the spirit of the monastery to which he is affiliated and strive to nurture that spirit within his own heart. Thus an Oblate of Benet Lake should have the cause of the Home Missions at heart and strive to assist the monks in their apostolic labors to the best of his ability both in a spiritual and a temporal way.

HISTORY OF OBLATES

From the life of St. Benedict, as told by St. Gregory the Great, it appears that Oblates were received by our holy Father already at Subiaco, before he founded his monastery at Monte Cassino. Apparently, however, these were only boys who were offered by their parents to be educated for the monastic life. Nevertheless St. Gregory's narrative seems to imply that there were devout adults living in the world who had placed themselves under St. Benedict's direction and used to visit his monastery occasionally for guidance and instruction. Whether these were Oblates in the present sense of the term we cannot definitely tell. The term Oblate does not appear in monastic literature until the eleventh century. But already in the ninth century we meet with the term "confratres," which is the name still used for Oblates in the English Congregation of Benedictines. A monk of that period writes, "There are a great many of the faithful, both poor and rich, who request confraternity with us. We give unto all of them participation in whatever good is done in our monastery, be it by prayer or almsgiving. Let us make special prayer for them, both while they live and after their death." These words, penned a thousand years ago by an unknown monk, accurately describe the bond of charity that to this day exists between Oblates and the monastery to which they belong.

A precise form and status was given to the Oblates by St. William, Abbot of Hirschau (d. 1091). There were the Interns or Regular Oblates, who lived in the monastery without taking vows. Then there were the Externs or Secular Oblates who lived in the world, but were affiliated with the monastery and carried out the principles of the Holy Rule to the best of their ability in their private lives. This was the Golden Age of the great monastery of Cluny and historians tell us that large numbers of the faithful consecrated themselves to God under the banner of St. Benedict by affiliation to Cluny and its dependent monasteries. It was this age of religious fervor that produced the revered and holy Emperor St. Henry, who because of his early desire to become a Benedictine himself and his great love and veneration of the Order has been chosen as the Patron of Oblates.

The Oblate movement received new impetus when in the fifteenth century St. Frances of Rome (1384-1440) organized some noble Roman matrons into a community of Oblates to exercise charity among the poor of the city. St. Frances of Rome is rightly considered to be the patroness of the Oblates.

In the following centuries, Oblates were more or less numerous until the French Revolution. The social and political upheaval at that time practically wiped out the Benedictine Order as it did so many other religious Orders. However, those institutions which are truly of God cannot be destroyed by the intrigues and selfishness of men. In the nineteenth century, monasticism again flowered forth in all its old strength and when done for God. Whether spiritual, intellectual, or manual, the labor of the monk is but another expression of his dedication to God. This explains the relative silence of the Holy Rule on the subject of work, and also the wonderful variety of activities undertaken by Benedictines throughout the centuries. But history also shows the amazing success of Benedictines as missionaries. In the words of Bishop Ullathorne: "To form saints and to civilize mankind have been the two great vocations of the Benedictine Order."

OBEDIENCE

"The first degree of humility is obedience without delay" (c. 5). The cultivation of all the virtues is absolutely necessary for every religious person, for they can be separated only in speculation. But of them all, St. Benedict stresses complete and willing obedience as the infallible guide to perfection. After the example of the Divine Model, Who came to do His Father's will, the monk pledges and constantly strives to be obedient in all things. First of all, to the Commandments of God; then to the commands of his superior, who takes the place of Christ; to the Holy Rule and the obligations of the monastic way of life; to his fellow monks in all charity; and finally, to the promptings of grace in his own heart. Thus conceived, every moment of the day is open to the practice of this virtue. Nothing is more opposed to pride, and therefore to all sin, than the total submission of one's will; yet nothing is harder to accomplish.

HUMILIATIONS

Bound as he is to the common life, the monk shares his life with his brethren. In the Chapel, the refectory, at work or in recreation, or wherever he is, he must necessarily associate and cooperate with others. Such living together day after day, among men of diverse background and personality, cannot help but give rise to numerous inconveniences and misunderstandings, and sometimes even real friction. These are the humiliations that St. Benedict counted on to purify the souls of his monks. It is not necessary to impose penance and harsh commands; the ordinary, God-sent trials of the common life are enough. The moderate physical renunciation, demanded by the Rule as the minimum level of common observance, is but the preparation for this training of the spirit in fraternal charity. The monastery is not a penitentiary for working off the individual's sentence of guilt, but a spiritual workshop, a school of the Lord's service, the House and family of God. And it is by mutual help and forbearance, and the constant practice of what St. Benedict calls "good zeal," that the monk works out his own salvation, and the salvation of his family.

Such is the Benedictine. His motto: Ora et Labora—pray and work! His life is one of simplicity and genuine joy; his reward: Pax—peace, here and hereafter.

WHY

"Be ready always with an answer to everyone who asks a reason for the hope that is in you" 1 Peter 3, 15.

BENEDICTINE WAY OF LIFE

Every vocation to the Religious Life involves renunciation of the world and self out of love for God. Yet each religious order has a distinctive character, its own special approach to perfection. For the Benedictines, the norms of the spiritual life are contained in that "outstanding monument of Roman and Christian prudence, the Holy Rule of St. Benedict" (Fulgens Radiatur, Pope Plus XII).

Literally thousands of canonized Saints owe their glory to its guidance, while no less than thirty-three Benedictines have been raised to the exalted Chair of Peter. The first of these, St. Gregory the Great, was also the first and best biographer of the Holy Patriarch: "The man of God, Benedict, among the many wonderful works that made him famous in this world, was also conspicuous for his teaching: for he wrote a Rule for monks, remarkable for discretion and rich in instruction" (Dial. Bk. 2, c. 36). That Rule, operating through many Missionary Monasteries throughout the ages, has merited for St. Benedict the glorious title of "Father of Europe" as Pope Plus XII recently called him. St. Benedict died at Monte Cassino, Italy in 547. The Church keeps two great feasts in his honor: one on March 21, the date of his saintly death, and his Patronage on July 11.

THE BENEDICTINE FAMILY

Without doubt, the greatest single contribution made by St. Benedict to the religious life of his time, was the concept and vow of stability. No longer a solitary in the desert, the Benedictine monk is a "community man," committed to the common life in all things. By his vow of stability, he is not only bound to persevere in the monastic way of life, but to live with his brethren in community, and that in the monastery of his profession. The Abbot, elected for life by the monks, is the Father; the monks are his spiritual children; together they form a true family, with all that the name implies. Family additions are accepted and trained in the Novitiate, for each monastery is independent and autonomous like any other family. There are no Benedictine provinces, for each family unit is its own mother-house. The Abbot has complete authority and full responsibility, and is answerable only to the Holy See and to God for his government. In recognition of the Abbot's unique position, the Church grants him special rank and dignity in her hierarchy. In his own community, he has practically the same power and privileges that a Bishop enjoys in his Diocese. Thus, for example, he is invested with the miter, crosier, and ring; he is authorized to pontificate at liturgical functions, to confer Minor Orders on his subjects, and to consecrate the sacred vessels.

This family structure of the Benedictine way of life is the very foundation of all monastic activity. Having renounced the world and himself by professing the holy and irrevocable vows of religion, the monk embraces the common life to fulfill the promises he has made. In unity there is strength, and it is with and through his brethren, that he comes to realize his one ambition: to live a life of purity and prayer, and to die in the peace of God.

THE DIVINE OFFICE

St. Benedict makes but one demand on the novice: "that he truly seek God." To determine the sincerity of this intention, he makes a three-fold observation: "Whether he is zealous for the work of God, for obedience, and for humiliations" (c. 58). This work of God, to which nothing is to be preferred, is the singing or recitation of the Divine Office in choir. It is the public chanting of the official prayer of the Church, that St. Pius X has called, "the primary and indispensable source of the true Christian spirit." Besides observing carefully all the sacred ceremonies prescribed by the Church, St. Benedict recommends only two rules: "Let us consider how we ought to conduct ourselves in the presence of God and His Angels, and so assist at the Divine Office that our mind may be in harmony with our voice" (c. 19). Each monk is encouraged to learn the entire Psalter by heart, or at least to study and master its contents.

In St. Benedict's time, the Sunday Mass was rightly held as the supreme act of Divine worship, and the center of the week's Office. A little later, and proceeding to our own day, the community High Mass was sung daily. It remains the crowning point of each day's activity, at once the full expression of adoration and thanksgiving, and the source of Divine Grace and blessing. In the ever-recurring seasons of the Church's Liturgy, the whole of Catholic doctrine and devotion is made the object of prayer and meditation. Living wholeheartedly the annual cycle of Feasts and fasts outlined by the Church, the monk is continually conscious of the sacred mysteries of Christ, and of his own part in them.

SPIRITUAL READING

By constant repetition of the Psalms, the heart of the monk becomes so filled with their inspired sentiments, that they soon become the expression of his own thoughts and emotions. But St. Benedict realized the limitations of human nature and wished to supplement this spiritual diet of poetry, with the equally inspired texts of the two Testaments, and the writings of the Fathers. Besides the usual four hours spent daily in choir, singing the Mass and the Divine Office, he rules that several hours of each day be devoted to spiritual reading. While somewhat different from the scientific study of theology as developed by the later Scholastics, its purpose was the same: to assimilate the sacred truths of Christianity, and to share in the knowledge of God.

Private prayers and devotions are the exception rather than the rule; they have their place when prompted by Divine Grace but they are always to be short and pure. Time left over from the work of God, and not given to reading, is to be spent in labor. In St. Benedict's mind, prayer was co-extensive with life. To live as a monk was to pray; prayer is work, and work is prayer ing, but for our purity of heart and tears of compunction."

SPIRITUAL PRECEPTS

Since the entire Rule is based on the Gospel counsels and commands, and since the monastic life is merely the perfection of the Christian life, St. Benedict offers no new teaching. Every page of the Rule is concerned with the spiritual life of the monk in one way or another. Several chapters, however, present such an outstanding treatment of some of the fundamental virtues that they must be mentioned here. Such are those on obedience, silence, poverty, and especially, humility and the instruments of good works. The twelve degrees of humility outlined by St. Benedict are a masterpiece of spiritual direction, and may well be considered the basic standard or rule of all Christian perfection. Beginning with the fear of God, and the keeping of all His Commandments, the soul gradually ascends the ladder of self-renunciation, ever growing in the love of God. At the summit, the monk's outward appearance can no longer hide the inner joy and peace found in intimate union with God. The 72 instruments of good works are the spiritual tools of the monks, "which, if they be constantly employed by day and by night, and delivered up on the day of judgment, will gain for us from the Lord that reward which He Himself has promised."

MONASTIC WORK

"Idleness is the enemy of the soul. Therefore, the brethren should be occupied at certain times in manual labor, and at other fixed hours in holy reading." St. Benedict desired that each monastic family be autonomous in its government and economically independent. "The monastery, if it be possible, ought to be so constructed that all things necessary, such as, water, a mill, a garden, a bakery, and the various workshops, may be contained within it." Besides the labor involved in supplying the needs of the monks themselves, St. Benedict expects the monks to care for all the sick, the poor, and the guests and travelers who ask for aid. Nowhere does St. Benedict specify any external work or mission for his monks. As a result, in the fourteen hundred years of their history, Benedictines have entered nearly every field of Christian activity that was not directly opposed to the regular observance of the common life. This development is the natural fulfillment of St. Benedict's cardinal principle, "that in all things God may be glorified."

Most of the twenty-two Benedictine Abbeys in this country consider parish work and school work, High Schools, Colleges, Minor and Major Seminaries, as their major external activity; St. Benedict's Abbey at Benet Lake, Wisconsin has been established expressly for Home Missionary work on a community basis.

WHY

"Be ready always with an answer to everyone who asks a reason for the hope that is in you" 1 Peter 3, 15.

THE RULE OF ST. BENEDICT

"The man of God, Benedict, among the many wonderful works that make him famous in this world, was also conspicuous for his teaching; for he wrote a Rule for monks, remarkable for discretion and rich in instruction. If anyone desires to know more deeply the life and character of the man, he may find in the ordinances of that Rule the exact image of his whole government: for the holy man cannot possibly have taught otherwise than as he lived." The author of these words, St. Gregory the Great, who was Pope from 590 to 604 and was himself a Benedictine, attests his firm belief in this Rule as an infallible guide to sanctity. Literally millions of men and women, throughout the centuries following St. Benedict's death in 547, have shared this conviction, and have followed this Rule to Heavenly peace and glory. Aside from the inspired Books of the Holy Scriptures, perhaps no other single writing has so thoroughly influenced the development and growth of Christianity, and of civilization itself, in the Western world. We will now briefly examine the contents of St. Benedict's Rule for Monks.

In the Prologue, St. Benedict invites all who "truly seek God" to return to Him by a program of prayer and work, directed by obedience to authority. These few paragraphs determine the setting and provide the key to the 72 Chapters and Epilogue that follow.

THE ABBOT

St. Benedict wrote his Rule for Cenobites, that is, "for those who live in a monastery, serving under a Rule and an Abbot." Patterned after the human family, the Abbot is the Father of his monks. He is regarded as holding the place of Christ in the monastery, and has full responsibility for the spiritual and temporal welfare of his family. His authority is limited only by the Holy Rule itself, and the knowledge that one day he will have to render an account of his stewardship before the dreadful Judgment Seat of God. Because of the importance of this position, St. Benedict devotes two long chapters exclusively to the qualities required in the Abbot, and to his election by the brethren. To help the Abbot in his task of ruling souls, and to facilitate the smooth operation of the monastery, St. Benedict prescribes various subordinate offices in great detail. All of these assistants, however, are bound to follow the commands of the Father of the community, and they may be recalled at his discretion. Nearly every chapter of the Rule, with the exception of those treating directly of the Divine Office, contains some reference to the Abbot's paternal authority. This familial structure is one of the outstanding features of Benedictine life. To insure and safeguard this concept, St. Benedict not only demands absolute obedience on the part of his monks, but insists on a Vow of Stability. In pronouncing this vow, the individual monk binds himself to remain forever in the monastery of his profession. This element of permanence was something new in monastic legislation at the time St. Benedict wrote his Holy Rule, yet it is the greatest single factor in the remarkable growth and activity of St. Benedict's followers throughout the centuries.

DISCIPLINE

To understand St. Benedict's regulation of monastic discipline, it is necessary to recall the harsh and even unreasonable austerities that had been the ideal of the Eastern monks. Here again, St. Benedict acknowledges and accepts the best that his predecessors could provide. Having lived as a hermit in the first few years of his own monastic career, St. Benedict realized that this severity was unsuitable for many, and even dangerous at times. Thus he tempered and softened the rigorous practices of the solitary life, laying down a minimum level of observance within the reach of all. After outlining in detail the amount of sleep, food, clothing, prayer, times of silence and work, he then demands strict adherence to these regulations by all alike. For those who fail or refuse to conform, the Abbot is provided with a variety of punishments and other means of correction. No less than 13 chapters are devoted to this subject, all of them remarkable for their spirit of charity and patience. For those who desire a harder life, St. Benedict wisely recommends a more perfect observance of what is already prescribed. Any further austerities must first have the permission and blessing of the Abbot, although during Lent, all of the brethren are encouraged "to add something to our ordinary burden of service." In regulating poverty, St. Benedict is inflexible: "Above all, let this vice be rooted out of the monastery: namely, that one presume to give or to receive anything without leave of the Abbot, or to keep anything as his own, absolutely anything at all." The same is true for obedience: "He (the monk) shall have not even the free use of his own body." Finally: "Let the Abbot so temper all things that the strong may still find something they will do with zeal, and the weak may not be disheartened."

PRAYER

St. Benedict's monks are to be occupied in manual labor, reading and, above all, in the official prayer-life of the Church. The center of the monastic life, around which all activity both spiritual and physical turns, is the "Opus Dei," the Work of God. The daily schedule is determined by the canonical Hours of the Divine Office, to which nothing is to be preferred. Sixteen chapters of the Rule are devoted to regulating the order of the Psalms, the readings from Scripture, the time, length and other details of this choral obligation. The singing of the public and official Prayers of the Church, together with the celebration of Holy Mass, constitute the monk's chief duty. So firmly was this principle established by St. Benedict, and so faithfully have his sons carried it out, that today nearly everyone associates any and everything liturgical with Benedictines. As to private prayer, St. Benedict recommends brevity, reverence and humility: "And let us remember that we shall be heard not because of much speak-

Dear [redacted]

Your letter of July 16, 1961, has been received, and I want to thank you for your kind remarks concerning my book, "Masters of Deceit."

The expression of confidence contained in your communication was most reassuring, and my associates and I sincerely hope that our future endeavors will merit your continued approval. Please be assured that my only desire is to remain in my present capacity as long as I may be of service to our country.

In response to your request, the FBI is an investigative agency of the Federal Government and as such neither makes evaluations nor draws conclusions as to the character or integrity of any organization, publication or individual. Dear [redacted]

Your letter of July 13, 1961, has been received.

I sincerely appreciate the interest you have indicated in my book, "Masters of Deceit," and am glad to have the opportunity to attempt to clarify the point you questioned. The discussion as to methods of detecting communist fronts sets out as one of the tests the question, "Does it denounce both fascists and communists?" Experience has shown that groups sympathetic to communism will constantly attack what they consider to be fascism, while refusing to criticize anything being espoused by the Communist Party. On the other hand, a genuinely nonpartisan group shows no reluctance to attack either one or both of these extreme positions. The communists and their sympathizers are quite cunning and no means of advancing their aims and objectives are overlooked; therefore, it behooves all of us to remain alert to detect any tactic, new or old, which may be used in the effort to destroy our way of life.

Enclosed is some material on the general subject of communism which you may like to read.

Sincerely yours,
J. Edgar Hoover

Dear Sir:

Upon reading your book "Masters of Deceit" I find myself in general agreement with it except in a few instances. For instance on Page 225 of the Pocket Book edition under the heading of how to detect a Communist front you state that a front can be recognized if, according to the second question in the seventh question, It denounces both Fascists and Communists.

Was there an error on your part or do you sincerely believe that an organization that denounces both extreme positions should come under suspicion as a front organization?

Yours Sincerely

Dear Sir

I have just finished reading your book, "Masters of Deceit", and I would like to compliment you on an outstanding job. This book has opened my eyes to the terrible doctrine which Communism advocates. If it isn't too much trouble I would like some more information about the workings of the Communist party and its workings in America. I am very interested in what will become of this struggle between our country and Russia and if in any way I can participate in fighting Communism from continuing to spread then I will gladly do so.

Dear

Your letter of July 23, 1961, has been received. It is indeed encouraging to hear from citizens who express an awareness of the communist menace and exhibit a desire to take positive action regarding it. I was interested in reading the contents of your communication.

Although I would like to be of service, as a matter of policy, I am unable to offer any recommendations or suggestions to you regarding the specific plan which you proposed. Certainly, any efforts toward educating and alerting the people of our Nation about communism deserve consideration. I hope you will understand my position in not being able to assist.

In view of your interest, I am enclosing some literature dealing with the general subject of subversion which you may like to read.

Dear Mr. Hoover:

I have read your book "Masters of Deceit" I have the paper back edition and on the back cover you say-- Every citizen has a duty to learn more about the menace that threatens his future, his home his children, the peace of the world--and that is why I have written this book- I read America wake up- by gen Carlos P Romulo- and in the August issue of Readers Digest the Scandal of Our Missile program by Kenneth O Gilmore- Romulo says we should train specialists in every branch of cold warfare instead of relying on Amateurs-- You say its the duty of every man woman and child-- Seems to me there should be "set up" a simple program in every community where serious thinking people could meet weekly in study and discussion groups-- It could be a part of this Civil Defense - or maybe called the J Edgar Hoover Club. Something surely needs to be developed to awaken the people-

You read about and hear about the John Birch Society Moral Rearmament. The National Education Society of Searcy Arkansas. They have occasssional Freedom Forums--How about having a weekly constructive program of study that would really enlighten the people in every community Theres a column in San Bernardeno Sun and occasionally you read letters from people that seem gravely concerned - but thats the end - until another person is inspired to write their feelings and attitude-

There should be a program which we could turn to one that could offer us constant study and elightenment if we amateurs are going to be helpful in combatting this cold war of the communists. Dear Mr. Hoover:

Thank you very much for your letter of June 23. It was a pleasure to participate in the distribution of your book, "Masters of Deceit."

I have a special interest in participating in programs of this nature because I was a Special Agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation for a short period.

Since my span of service with you was short, I have always felt I owed the Department something because of the money and interest spent by the Bureau for my entry and training.

It is a pleasure working with Mr. Mason, so if there is anything I can do to assist you on any project, please let me know.

Dear Mr. Hoover:

Having just finished reading your book "Masters of Deceit", I felt I had to write you and tell you how much I have always admired and respected you for the wonderful job you have always done and are still doing for our wonderful country.

There must be times when you feel your job is thank less but let me encourage you that there are thousands perhaps millions of people like myself who have been complacently sitting back, enjoying this "Good old U. S. A" because we felt safe having a man like you fighting our battles for us. After reading your wonderful book, I see now that I should have written this letter years ago. I have recommended your book to all my friends. I only regret you didn't write it sooner. I pray to God that we are not too late to save this great Nation of which my ancestors fought and sacrificed their lives.

God - Bless you Mr. Hoover and may you be watched over & protected in your great work. It is with the highest respect, I remain -

Respectfully

Mrs.

P.S. Beside reading your book, I read "The Naked Communist" and several others. You can rely on my family to do our share in combating this terrible threat to our Security.

Dear Mr. Hoover:

I am indeed grateful for your letter of "thanks" concerning a recent sermon which I preached here in Reno. Your token of personal appreciation, a personally autographed copy of your book, "Masters of Deceit" is a gift which I will always cherish. Thank you very much.

Certainly this is not flattery, but we who are ministers of the Gospel and we who are attempting to present to people the attractiveness of Christian living, are deeply indebted to you and others like you who put their Christian faith into everyday living. Your positive Christian convictions are evidenced in the men who work in your most important department of government. One of your men, [redacted] is a member of this congregation in Reno and no one is more highly respected. He has been our Sunday School superintendent and has a class of his own each Sunday morning. He would also probably be displeased with his pastor if he knew that I mentioned his name in this letter. But we have nothing but praise and admiration for him and the department which he represents and the man who has given his life for the preservation of the priceless freedoms of America - Mr. J. Edgar Hoover.

Thank you again for your generosity to me and for your devotion and faithful service to our beloved United States and to the Heads of our nation - God Almighty.

Dear [REDACTED]

Your letter of July 27, 1961, has been received, and the concern prompting your communication is appreciated.

With respect to the matter you discussed, the solution you suggest would require legislative action. It has always been my policy to refrain from injecting the FBI or myself into problems of this nature. Within the Department of Justice the question as to the desirability or undesirability of legislation is strictly a function of the Attorney General.

It is, however, encouraging to hear from citizens who demonstrate an awareness of the menace communism poses to our democratic way of life and, in this connection, I am enclosing some material concerning this atheistic evil which may be of interest to you.

Sincerely yours,

J. Edgar Hoover

Dear Mr. Hoover,

I wonder if you could explain an excerpt from your book ~~BOOK~~ which has puzzled me for some time. It appears on page 47. It is a quote from Nikita Khrushchev commenting on Stalin.

OMASTERS OF Deceit

"As a communist fighting for the interest of the working class, Stalin was a model communist... We have criticized him, and if necessary we will do it again. But we do not criticize Stalin as a bad communist as far as the interest of the working classes are concerned... God grant that every communist should fight for the interest of the working class as Stalin did.

Could you please explain the meaning of Khrushchev's use of the word God in this quote.

Dear [REDACTED]

Your letters postmarked July 26, 1961, have been received, and I do appreciate your kind remarks concerning my book, "Masters of Deceit."

I, of course, do not know what Mr. Khrushchev meant when he referred to God in the quotation mentioned by you. You can rest assured, however, that Mr. Khrushchev, being an atheist, did not imply any reverence or worship of God. The communists are bitter enemies of religion and are working diligently to destroy religious concepts.

While I would like to be of assistance in response to your inquiry concerning the John Birch Society, the FBI is strictly a fact-gathering agency and as such does not make evaluations of individuals or publications. I hope you will not infer from this either that we do or do not have the information you desire.

Dear Mr. Hoover,

I would like to commend you on the work you are doing to combat communism. I just finished reading your book, Masters of Deceit and I think that this is one of the most revealing books I have ever read. I hope that everyone in America has a chance to read this book. I think it will wake a lot of people up. I recently heard Herbert Philbrick speak at the Greater Miami Christian Anti-Communist crusade and it was very pleasing to hear what the FBI is doing to combat communism. I only wish there could be more organizations dedicated to combating communism. I would like to know what you think of the John Birch Society and their movement to impeach Earl Warren.

By letter dated July 28, 1961, captioned individual wrote to the Director thanking him for recent literature sent him pertaining to communism. It is noted that the only reference to appearing in Bufiles is a letter we sent him dated July 5, 1961, in reply to his earlier letter of June 28, 1961, in which he requested information not compiled and maintained by the Bureau. He was given a copy of the Attorney General's list of subversive organizations together with four other pamphlets prepared by the Bureau.

In his instant letter he states he has completed reading the Director's book, "Masters of Deceit," and he thanks the Director for making it available to the public. However, he points out that an error appears on page 237 of the Director's book wherein it states: "Jews cannot remain Jews and follow the atheism of Karl Marx and the deceit of the communist movement." He devotes the next five paragraphs of his letter to this supposed "error" and ends up by saying he hopes this misunderstanding will be clarified in the next printing of the book. He also offers to be of further service in the Director's endeavors to preserve freedom and truth. sent enclosures entitled "What is a Jew" and "A Jew finds Salvation."

RECOMMENDATION:

That attached letter of July 28, 1961, not be acknowledged in view of the criticism directed toward "Masters of Deceit."

Mr. J. Edgar Hoover

Dear Mr. Hoover:

I wish to thank you for the literature which you sent me pertaining to our fight against communism.

Also, I wish to thank you for your publication made available to the public: "Masters of Deceit". I am sorry to say it is most difficult to find on the stands or in the stores right now. I wish that the publisher would put forth a new and powerful effort in advertising your book.

With all due respect to you and those that were involved in compiling "Masters of Deceit", I must bring to your attention an error that does exist in the context.

On page 237 it is stated: "Jews cannot remain Jews and follow the atheism of Karl Marx and the deceit of the communist movement."

The basis for the above reasoning, which is most common among the great majority of all peoples, stems from an improper and unscriptural definition of what is a Jew. Confusion has developed because the word "Jew" is used to indicate both the race and the religion. There would be less misunderstanding if we spoke of the Hebrew people and the Jewish religion, Judaism.

The Jew who believes in Christ as his Messiah and Savior from sin, is a Jewish Christian. He remains a Jew by being born of the seed of Isaac, the son of Abram (Abraham), to whom God said in Genesis Chapter 12, verse 2, 3: "I will make of thee a great nation..." referring to the Hebrew people. In Chapter 15, verses 5 and 13 God speaks of the seed of Abraham.

A Jew is proclaimed by God to be in the lineage from Abraham.

A Jew can follow Judaism, or Christianity, or Buddhism, or be an atheist, or be a communist. He can be a French Jew, an American Jew of foreign born parents, an African Jew, etc..

A Jew cannot stop being a Jew anymore than a non-Jew can become a Jew. A non-Jew can follow the Jewish Religion, but he will not automatically become by lineage of the seed of Abraham.

I pray that this misunderstanding will be clarified in the next printing of your wonderful book.

EX-105

Enclosed are 2 short articles for your reading. If I can be of further use in any way in your endeavor to preserve freedom, please call on me.

Thanking you, I remain,

Sincerely

"WHAT IS A JEW?"

OR

Different Groups Who Claim to be Jews.

IN A recent issue of a nationally circulated Jewish weekly an account appeared of a strange cult which teaches that the earliest settlers in Ireland were Jews. These misguided people believe that "Tara's Halls" should really be "Torah's Hall," which they maintain, without any proof at all, was built to house the Torah, or the tablets of the Law given by God to Moses at Sinai. These, they state, were brought to Ireland by the prophet Jeremiah together with the daughter of Zedekiah, the last king of Judah, after the destruction of the Temple in Jerusalem about twenty-five centuries ago.

There are other groups of people who try to identify themselves with Israel or Judah, and go to incredibly absurd lengths to prove that they are the true lineal descendants of Jacob or of one of his sons.

To a simple Jew, such as the writer, who has suffered from prejudice and intolerance because he is a Jew, this is quite incomprehensible. It is difficult to understand how anybody should wish to identify himself with the most hated and persecuted people the world has ever known—not, of course, unless he has something to gain by it, and what could anybody gain by calling himself a Jew?

ARE THEY JEWS?

To make an already confusing situation even more complex there is a colored tribe in Abyssinia, the Falashas, who claim to be the true Jews, and there is a synagogue of colored Jews in New York

City. The Samaritans who still exist in small numbers in Nablus, Jordan, also claim to be the true Jews, and there is quite a large movement in England which asserts that the British people are the true Israelites. Are they Jews? Are the Falashas Jews? Are the Samaritans Jews? Are the Irish Jews? Are the Jews Jews?

If all these different people claim to be Jews, we must ask, is there no way of deciding who is a Jew? Most people would say that it is easy to tell a Jew by some physical characteristics, or by his name. But these are very uncertain guides, as all the semitic people look pretty much alike, such as the Arabs, Turks, Armenians, etc. A surname also is never a good criterion of a person's racial origin, as it is often derived from the name of a town, a vocation or a trade.

DOUBT EVEN IN ISRAEL.

Furthermore, the State of Israel has been grappling with this self-same problem for a number of years. Even the Jews are not quite sure who is a Jew! The question arose shortly after the passage of the Law of the Return in the Israeli Knesset, under which every Jew was given the right to return to the Land of Israel. He had, however, first of all to satisfy the authorities that he is a Jew, and there was no legal definition of this. Almost immediately some thousands of Japanese adopted the Jewish religion, claimed that they are now Jews, and demanded their rights under the Law of the Return to immigrate to Israel with the assistance of the Israeli government. They were, they maintained, Jews—Japanese Jews!

The traditional Jewish definition of a Jew is that anybody born of Jewish parents, or a proselyte, or one who has a Jewish mother alone, and who has not professed any other faith, or who has not been baptized, is a Jew. This means that religion is the test. Religion is equated with nationality in a very loose and illogical manner. Great care is taken to exclude all Jews who have accepted the teachings of the Bible concerning the Messiah of Israel, and who have confessed this faith in baptism. But if a Jew should deny his traditional religion or become an atheist or a freethinker, he is still regarded as being a Jew. Surely this is confused reasoning to say that a Jew remains a Jew if he should deny his faith, have no faith at all, or even become an atheist, yet if he should be a believer in Christ he ceases to be a Jew!

WHAT IS A JEWISH CHRISTIAN?

And what about the Jew who believes in Christ? Has he left his race because of his faith? The Jew who believes in Christ maintains that he is still a Jew by race, and nobody can deny this. He states that his belief is the true Judaism as it is taught in the Old and New Testaments, both of which are Jewish books, written by Jews. He believes that Judaism as it is practiced today in the synagogues and the homes is based largely on traditions and teachings that have no sanction in the Word of God. He believes in the Christ of the New Testament as the fulfillment of the Old Testament prophecies concerning the Messiah; that He came the first time as a sacrifice for sin in accordance with the Scriptures, and that He will come a second time to rule and judge the world.

The Jewish Christian believes that anybody born of the seed of Isaac is a Jew by race, and that nothing can change this simple fact. He believes all that the prophets have written, and because of this he has found his way back to God. He is no longer groping through a maze

CAN A JEW BELIEVE IN THE VIRGIN BIRTH?

Do you know that there is nothing incredible or impossible in the virgin birth of Christ, and that Jews can and do believe in it? If you would like to know more about this, just drop us a line and ask for our free pamphlet, "The Virgin Birth — is it Unbelievable, is it Impossible?" Correspondence on any matter dealt with in this paper is welcomed.

THE SHEPHERD OF ISRAEL

of formality, customs and traditions. He believes that the confusion in Jewish thinking is entirely due to the fact that the word "Jew" is used to indicate both the race and the religion. There would be less misunderstanding if we spoke of the Hebrew people, and the Jewish religion.

WHO IS THE TRUE JEW?

Jeremiah, the prophet, attacked the practices of the Jews of his day. They were a religious people; they had their fast days and their festivals, but he accused them of having wandered away from God and His truth; and regarding the observance of religious practices as an end in itself. God, Himself, speaking through the prophet strongly denounced this attitude when he said that the people had committed two evils, they had forsaken Him, "the fountain of living waters, and hewed themselves out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water" (Jeremiah 2:13). God calls the blind obedience to a ritual "broken cisterns."

The question as to who is a Jew by race is, therefore, not difficult to answer. Anybody born of Jewish parents; there will be Jews and there will be partial Jews. But a true Jew is one who is born of the Jewish race, and follows the true Jewish faith that God has given in His Word, the Old Testament and the New Testament.

Paul of Tarsus, one of the first Christians, and himself a Jew, summed up the whole situation concisely when he wrote:

He is not a Jew, which is one outwardly; neither is that circumcision, which is outward in the flesh: But he is a Jew, which is one inwardly; and circumcision is that of the heart, in the spirit, and not in the letter; whose praise is not of men, but of God (Romans 2:28,29).

Do you want to be a true Jew—a believing Jew? Do you want to return to the "Old Paths," of which Jeremiah spoke? You can do so only by accepting Jesus Christ as your personal Saviour, as the One Who died and rose again. He even now calls to you, "Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Why Did God Allow the Nazis to Kill Six Million Jews?

THE Jewish Daily Forward, one of the leading Jewish language newspapers of New York, in its issue of March 24, 1961, printed a letter received from a Brooklyn Jewess containing this question:

Why did God allow the Nazis to kill six million Jews — men, women, and children? Where was God when the murderers stretched out their hands to kill and destroy human beings?

The Jewish woman who wrote the letter to the newspaper went on to say that when she asked the question of her Rabbi, she was told by him that God was trying out His people to see if they would believe in Him when persecuted. The woman, however, was not satisfied with the answer. Would God, in His righteousness, she wanted to know, do such things just to test the Jews, His beloved nation?

A PERPLEXING QUESTION

I must agree with the Brooklyn Jewess. I am not satisfied with her Rabbi's answer, even though the Rabbi explained that God tries His people as He tried Abraham with his son Isaac. However, God did not permit Abraham to kill Isaac. Is it possible that God in His love and compassion would allow six million men, women and children to be destroyed? Jews are still asking the question, Who is guilty? Many are wondering if the catastrophe could have been averted, and what should be done to avoid another such holocaust.

When I began to think about the problem I became confused and distressed. How could I find an answer to this question? I can still remember how the soldiers from Hitler's Germany came into our little town in Poland and gathered all the Jewish men, women and children into the synagogue and burned it down. Miraculously I escaped by God's help and was saved from a terrible death, only to be sent to the concentration camps where my people were systematically killed.

Why didn't the Rabbi of whom this Brooklyn woman asked her question point her to the Bible, where the answers to all perplexing question of this nature can be found? I went to the Bible and found out that the suffering we Jews have undergone and still undergo is the result of our rejection of God.

When persecution and extinction threaten us, instead of seeking the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, we turn to the arm of flesh, to the agencies of this world for protection and deliverance. We go everywhere and to everyone except to God. We turn our backs on the only One who is able to help us. We are satisfied with substitutes for God and find they are only devices of Satan to carry us farther and farther away from God and our only Saviour. Reading the Bible I learn that Satan is the Adversary and Destroyer, and when we accept his help and reject God's help, Satan becomes our ruler and turns us over to his servants, the Hitlers and the Eichmanns, to carry out his satanic work of race annihilation. In Deuteronomy 29:24,25, we read, Wherefore hath Jehovah done thus unto this land? What meaneth the heat of this great anger? Then men shall say, Because they forsook the covenant of Jehovah, the God of their fathers.

And in Deuteronomy 30:15,19,20,

See, I have set before thee this day life and good, and death and evil... I call heaven and earth to witness against you this day, that I have set before thee life and death, the blessing and the curse: therefore choose life that thou mayest live, thou and thy seed... for he is thy life and the length of thy days.

There is an answer to the question asked by the Brooklyn Jewess.

THE ONLY ANSWER

God has called us Jews to be His witnesses — "Ye are my witnesses... that I am God" (Isaiah 43:12). Yes, we should be witnesses to the glory of God, but have we been? Instead we have gone every man to his own way.

We have turned every one to his own way (Isaiah 53:6).

Some of our people have turned to the way of the mystical, talmudical, non-biblical teachings of chassidism, some have turned to reformism; some have gone to the extreme of rationalism; some rely on politics, or on Zionism. In doing so we have forgotten that there is a great and mighty God who has in His love and mercy given us the Holy Bible to be our guide.

At the end of World War II, and unable to forget the frightful atrocities of the Nazi campaign of race extermination against our Jewish people, I kept asking myself, What could I do to help the Jews understand the meaning of these outbursts of Jew-hate on the part of Gentile nations and individuals? I longed for peace of mind and hoped to find it if I could only show my people why these persecutions arise and why God permits them.

As an orthodox Jew I always believed that the Word of God is the true light of this dark world, and that we Jews must respect and honor it, and obey its precepts. But, I asked myself, do we live up to these precepts and commandments? Very few of us keep the Sabbath or put on the phylacteries each day. How many of us even try to keep the 613 precepts? As a nation, the answer to these questions

Dear [redacted]

I have received your letter of July 24, and I want to take this opportunity to thank you for your kind and generous comments concerning my book, "Masters of Deceit."

With regard to your suggestion, you might be interested in knowing that various groups, acting on their own initiative, have made copies of my book available to school libraries to be used by students as reference texts. In addition, students in some localities have been given copies of the book upon their graduation from high school. The endorsement of "Masters of Deceit" by you and other citizens is certainly reassuring.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr Hoover,
I have just finished reading your book
"Masters of Deceit"

The way you wrote it is very comprehensible and also would be very worthwhile for the young generation to understand fully the facts of Communism.

This would only be possible if High Schools, and Universities were to list it as required reading for Government, History Courses or even in a Literature Course. Since there are books that a student is required to read, why not a book that will help him to appreciate our government??

We realize that the Federal Government can not push this but perhaps if the schools were to get the suggestion they would do so. Especially the individuals who pick out the reading material for schools.

Sincerely Yours

Dear Mr. Hoover:

I wish to thank you for the copy of your "Masters of Deceit", which you so kindly inscribed and had delivered to me by my friend and your local Agent, [redacted]

A series of slight but incapacitating complications following an eye operation last fall have impeded my finishing what I consider to be one of the most vital and exciting books that I have ever read.

It is my feeling that every person in this country capable of doing so, and who is interested in the preservation of our way of life should read your fine book in order that he might become familiar with the symptoms of the dread disease of Communism which so seriously threatens on all sides.

Certainly, I feel that I am a better American for having read it and am far more competent in the evaluation of the great amount of material that comes before me in my business of broadcasting.

Once more, please accept my sincere thanks. I shall readily and vehemently recommend the reading of "Masters of Deceit" to whomever I have the opportunity.

Cordially yours,

Dear [Redacted]

Your letter of July 27, 1961, has been received. I want to take this opportunity to thank you for furnishing me the benefit of your observations concerning my book, "Masters of Deceit." Your activity in connection with the dissemination of this book is appreciated.

I was pleased to learn that you and Dr. Ruben de Leon enjoyed viewing our facilities, and it was thoughtful of you to write me regarding this matter.

Although I cannot authorize you to act in any official capacity for the FBI, I want to assure you that citizens can be of great aid to us in our work by making available information they acquire indicative of criminal or subversive activity within our investigative jurisdiction. Your continued interest in this Bureau and your generous comments concerning the work performed by this agency are a source of reassurance to me.

Sincerely yours,

J. Edgar Hoover

Mr. Edgar Hoover
 Director of the F.B.I.
 Washington, D.C.

My dear Mr. Hoover:

During my visit to Washington the first days of this month I missed you because you were busy in other conferences. In reality I want to express my gratitude for the royal treatment that [redacted]

[redacted] and I received. [redacted] is my friend. [redacted]

[redacted] and is therefore a well prepared and intelligent man. He was agreeably surprised with the treatment and deferences shown us and also the marvelous work that your agency, the most important in the United States in my opinion, is doing. This letter brings to you my most sincere expressions of gratitude for your courtesies to me.

But this is not the principal purpose of this letter. During my visit to Washington I also spoke with Mr. Richard Salvatierra, Director of Latin American Affairs of the U.S. Information Agency. Stressing the problem of propaganda, I spoke to him of a matter which concerns me personally. I explained to him specifically that my son failed in his studies in "World History" and that the subjects Communism and Socialism were very difficult for boys of his age to understand - I might mention that my son is 14 years old and is in the ninth grade, going on to the tenth. Trying to understand the soul of others has always been a hobby with me. I asked my son why he found it difficult to understand these things and I told Mr. Salvatierra of his explanations. The explanation is simple. "It is very difficult to understand" - he told me - "I took your book in my hands, Mr. Hoover, the copy you so kindly sent me, "Masters of Deceit", and then my son understood perfectly what communism was. I insisted then with Mr. Salvatierra that it would be a good idea if your book be used as a text book in the schools. Weeks have passed and to my surprise, my dream became a reality. Your book is going to be used in the Catholic schools and it is in all the newspapers of Miami, that the children of our great nation may know what communism is.

NOT RECORDED

145 AUG 9 1961

I am addressing myself also to the Attorney General, Mr. Robert Kennedy, to suggest the idea that "Masters of Deceit" should be, not only in the catholic schools, but that it be a text book for study in all the schools of the United States. I am convinced to satiety that what I am saying is the truth, that your book would be very good for our youth.

These great triumphs and these great satisfactions you are enjoying are in some degree also mine, as my lips have repeated them, and my mind and my heart have felt them also. I would like to do many things and I wish you would give me the opportunity of working more intensely with you here in Miami. I have many ideas and of course I give to my friends in the office here all the information and all the good things that come to my attention, but perhaps better guided and with specific instructions I could render a good social service.

I write to you now and then to have news of you and also to make known to you my own ideas. I also told Mr. Salvatierra that 3,000 copies were too few... that 3,000,000 have to be printed. This is what I have in mind at the present time. W

Congratulations for your success, and please count on me always as one of the people who want to see you triumph and who admires you,

Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, Director

Department of Justice
Washington 25, D. C.

Dear Mr. Hoover:

The two attached bulletins are self-explanatory yet they will give you a general idea of a program for members of our church and guests aimed at educating our people as to the techniques, purposes and progress made by the Communist Conspiracy.

We have tried to keep our program factual and truthful in order for it to be effective. Study material recommended to our group has been of the character such as: your book, "Masters of Deceit", "The Naked Communist" by Cleon Skousen, and "You Can Trust A Communist" by Fred Schwarz.

We know that knowledge is essential in the understanding and fighting of the Communist menace and it is my understanding that certain literature and pamphlets covering the Communist Conspiracy are available through your office. I would deeply appreciate receiving a list of the things that are available and a price sheet covering the items. I feel that anything that comes out of your office would be very helpful to us.

If you have any suggestions as to the conduct of a program of this type, I would be most eager to hear from you.

Sincerely yours,

PRESENTS

NEWSPAPER COLUMNIST

SUBJECT

"CHALLENGE OF AMERICAN FREE ENTERPRISE"

DATE: MONDAY, AUGUST 7th

TIME: 7:45 P.M. SHARP

PLACE: 5000 COLFAX AVE.

MR. GEORGE TODT, newspaper columnist and former television commentator, has editorialized fearlessly on the air and in the newspapers on the menace of Communism. For so doing, he has received merit citations from the Veterans of Foreign Wars and Sons of the American Revolution. His thought provoking column, "GEORGE TODT'S OPINION" won the George Washington honor medal from the Freedom's Foundation at Valley Forge, Pa., in 1959 and 1960. His column has been published in the United States Congressional Record 165 times in the past five years.

From his college studies and his World War II Infantry Combat experience, as well as three years spent in the Army of Occupation in Germany and Austria, MR. TODT has learned first hand of the aims, and method of accomplishing these aims, used by the Communists in their present-day campaign against the whole world, and particularly the United States.

Those of us who regularly read MR. TODT'S daily column in the Los Angeles Herald Express recognize him as a well informed columnist. Those of us who have had the privilege of hearing him speak recognize him as not only a dynamic speaker but a dedicated American who is not afraid to fight for the principles of Americanism which made this country great. MR. TODT is a "constructive apostle" of "REASON and LIGHT" who brings a message of LIGHT, not HEAT. He is appearing as a member of Coast Federal Savings' Free Enterprise Speakers Bureau.

STEPHEN SZABO

HUNGARIAN FREEDOM FIGHTER

"HUNGARY AFLAME"

50 MINUTE DOCUMENTARY FILM OF 1956 REVOLUTION

MONDAY, JULY 24

TIME: 7:45 P. M. SHARP

STEPHEN SZABO'S story is a simple one but a very sad one — after World War II when the Russian Red Army occupied Hungary and realizing that the freedom of his native land was at stake, many young boys like STEPHEN, only 16 years old, began to pass out Anti-Red literature. STEPHEN was arrested with many of his fellow students — the Russian Secret Police on the first night held him face down and beat his legs with a rubber hose. STEPHEN counted up to 251 blows before he passed out. He was tortured by nail and toe pulling and sentenced to hang three times. At one time he had only two hours to live. Due to 6½ years of torture both of STEPHEN'S legs were amputated but he does not complain — he feels many of his countrymen lost much more than he.

The film, "HUNGARY AFLAME", brings to light what really happened during the Hungarian Revolution of 1956 — STEPHEN prays that this film will serve as a warning to his adopted country, America, and Americans as to what could happen to us if we fail to recognize and act against the ruthless, inhumane, atheistic, Godless oppressors of freedom.

Dear Sir: I have just finished reading your book "Masters of Deceit"..and I am amazed and alarmed at the tremendous inroads Communism has made in our country..almost without our being aware of it. Your book set me to reading other material, and to alerting other people...who were as amazed as I was.

Masters of Deceit

I should like to inquire of you might have any free literature as well as a list of material that one might purchase..so that I can get it around to clubs, churches and friends..and perhaps waken a few Americans to this great danger.

I also have a grand daughter in high school, who has done a fine job of alerting her class..so that they asked for a study to be given..and one of the Dr. in her town came and talked to them and now they are anxious for more materials. I would like you to place her name on your list for materials if you would.

, Rt 4, Ex 236, Kinston, N.C.

I will appreciate anything you can send me also, and I can assure you it will be put to work...where it will do some good.

Thank you and your find organization for the good work you are doing to help keep our country free.

Sincerely,

Dear [Redacted]

Your letter of July 28 was brought to my attention.

My book, "Masters of Deceit," was intended as a basic text on communism, and I am pleased that you have found it beneficial. Certainly, communism is the greatest single threat facing the freedoms we all cherish, and it is always encouraging to hear from those who have an awareness of this problem. The desire of you and your granddaughter to take active measures in opposing this menace is indeed reassuring.

Although it is not possible to furnish our publications on a continuing basis, I am sending [Redacted] some material which may be of assistance to her, and I am also enclosing some literature for your use. Additional copies are available in reasonable quantities and will be furnished if you will advise us of your specific requirements. There is no charge for this service.

Dear Sirs: About eight years ago your department was very helpful in helping me locate my brother, whom I had not seen in forty years. It was a happy reunion and one which will always make me feel kindly toward your bureau!

I am bringing you another problem now, and in confidence of course. My daughter is married to a young man, I say young, he is about 42 to be exact. He served in the 30th Div. in World War II, when my daughter met him. He is a tobacco farmer and one with not much ambition or progressiveness about him. My daughter has been ill for several years and is steadily growing worse. Recent talks with her Doctor have told us that unless there are changes in their home life that she is definitely headed for a complete mental collapse.

My husband and I have had to help our financially with their children on many occasions and do not mind doing this, but certainly do not want to see her (our daughter) have to be committed to a mental institution, because of the fact that they are so poor, and that he prefers not to go anywhere with her. Somehow this strikes me as very odd, that he prefers never to be seen, never to have anyone know just where he lives, never wants to eat out, selects a barber shop that is far back off the beaten track for a haircut...will never go to the warehouses to sell his tobacco but sends it with a brother...to me this seems as though a person who acts thus- must have something to hide.

Then I remembered something...shortly after he came home from the war..he and my daughter stayed with us a few months until he could decide what he wanted to do...then he decided he would go back to the farm his father had left him... near Kinston, N.C. they had only been gone about a month when an FBI man came to our home seeking him. When I asked what it was about..I was told they wanted to question him about someone else in his outfit. I told them he could be found, but on checking to see if the FBI had followed through the... they said "No"..that no one had called them there.

What I am wondering is..is there anything on his record that might cause him to hide out like he does? My daughter having no companionship from him, and having to live this way, is growing worse daily...and while I do not like to pry into anyone's past...if it will provide something to keep my daughter out of a complete mental state..then I must do what I can.

All the information I can give you..is his name [redacted] born at Woodington (just outside Kinston N.C.) his serial number in service was [redacted] Can you tell me if there is anything on his record that would cause an FBI man to seek him out..as he did, even though he gave another reason for seeking him?

I appreciate any information you can give me. Thank you so much.

By letter to the Director dated 7-28-61, correspondent commented favorably regarding "Masters of Deceit," commended the FBI, and requested that she be furnished with communist reprints for the purpose of distributing them in her community. She stated that her granddaughter Route 4, Box 236, Kinston, North Carolina, was a high school student and had done a good job of alerting her class regarding communism. She requested that name be placed on our "list for materials."

Bufiles reflect that correspondent wrote to the Bureau on 11-1-59 concerning her son-in-law, She complained of his lack of ambition, his desire for isolation, and claimed this was causing his wife (correspondent's daughter) to have a mental collapse. She related that at a prior time an FBI Agent had attempted to locate and had told her that he merely wanted to question concerning one of his former associates in the military service. She requested any available information regarding Our outgoing to her of 11-9-59 advised her that we had no interest in was not identifiable in Bufiles. Bufiles 79-1-A and 79-1-1806 indicate that in 1950 we furnished with information which enabled her and her two sisters to locate a 62-year-old brother whom they had not seen for forty years.

Correspondent was furnished with an in-absence response on 8-1-61 pending a check by the field. Charlotte advised that inquiry by that office disclosed no derogatory information regarding correspondent and , who resided with her parents, and who would be in the ninth grade in school this year.

Dear Mr. Hoover,

[redacted] of Holy Name Parish, St. Louis, Missouri, contacted me today regarding a "J. Edgar Hoover Book Report Contest."

[redacted] advised that they are going to conduct a contest on "Masters of Deceit," the object being to have as many teenagers as possible read this book. I had never met [redacted] before today, but he heard that I was a former F.B.I. agent and wanted some ideas and perhaps some assistance.

I have taken the liberty of contacting about a dozen ex agents in St. Louis to meet in the immediate future in an effort to assist [redacted]. It would be our idea to furnish paper bound editions of this book free of charge to anyone unable to obtain one at their local bookstore. Our group of ex agents would finance this part of the contest. It is also felt that we might be able to persuade [redacted] President of St. Louis University, to award a four year scholarship to the winner of the contest. We also felt that we might obtain the cooperation of the Presidents of the local womens' colleges to award a four year scholarship in the event the winning entry was a girl.

We are creating a lot of enthusiasm for this, but want to make sure that you really give your sanction to this book report contest before proceeding further. We firmly believe that if this is successful in Missouri, it could become a national contest. And, we believe this is an excellent manner in which to bring the problem and solution of the threat of communism before the young people of our country.

Please may I hear from you.

Respectfully yours,

Dear [redacted]

I have received your letter of August 7, with enclosure, and want to thank you for your generous comments. I am pleased that you found my book, "Masters of Deceit," helpful to you in writing your senior theme, which I have read with interest.

I want you to know of my deep appreciation for the confidence you have shown in the value of the publication. The book was written in the hope that it would become a useful text for students and other Americans interested in learning more about the threat of communism. The students of today will be confronted with major decisions in the struggle of this conspiracy to destroy the American heritage, and the effectiveness of their resistance will depend on their knowledge of the history, aims and methods of the communist movement.

It is always good to hear from young people, such as you, who demonstrate an awareness of the problems facing this Nation, and a sincere desire to prepare themselves to meet the communist challenge to our freedom.

You may be sure my associates in our Cleveland Office will appreciate, as I do, the kind sentiments you have expressed. I am returning your theme to you.

Sincerely yours,
J. Edgar Hoover

Dear Mr. Hoover:

The threat of Communism to our country has always been of interest and concern to me. I have wondered just what any private individual could do to help fight this menace. A few months ago a friend of my father's obtained a copy of your book from [redacted] of the Cleveland office of the FBI to give to me as a present. My friend [redacted] felt that my interest should receive direction and that your book would be most helpful. He was exactly right. After reading it, I reached the decision that my senior theme would be based on this subject as applied to the Cleveland area.

The result of this effort is enclosed, with your permission. It is not what I would like to have done, but rather all that I could do since my time on it was cut short by two months when I was completely laid up by an accident. There is so much more that I wanted to cover, but I am most grateful to you for the help I received from your book, also to the personnel at the local office, and to the family friends. The grades received and the comment by the teacher are somewhat indicative: Outline A-, Bibliography A, Footnotes B, Theme B, and total grade B+. This is the comment, "Your theme is well planned and in many places forcefully written. You need to try to make it a smoother whole by improving the transitions between paragraphs."

I was an active member of the "Hi-Forum" at Lakewood High School and we concerned ourselves with America's foreign relations, took part in the mock session of the United Nations (sponsored by the Junior Council on World Affairs), and listened to speakers from various countries. The subject of Communism and its intrusion into our country became increasingly important in our thinking. The young people I know would like to do something decisive to help in our own local areas, but we want to do what is right and are somewhat confused about what we can do.

Thank you for your book and for the very real help it has been.

Dear Sir:

After reading your book, "Masters of Deceit" and realizing the dire threat to our national freedom, an important question has arisen that you must help answer. What can I do?

My friend and I enthusiastically pledged to begin an anti-communist campaign. To succeed in this we will need literature and information for a set plan of action. Upon cooperation from high school principals, we could introduce a youth program to the students. Would it be possible to obtain anti-communist literature for distribution to schools?

Your counsel regarding this matter would be deeply appreciated. Thank you.

Your letter postmarked August 8, 1961, has been received, and I want to thank you for your kind remarks concerning the work performed by this Bureau.

It was indeed good of you to give me the benefit of your comments concerning my book, "Masters of Deceit." In response to your inquiry relative to outlawing the Communist Party, you may wish to know that it has always been my policy to refrain from injecting the FBI or myself into problems relating to legislation. Within the Department of Justice the question as to the desirability or undesirability of legislation is strictly a function of the Attorney General.

I am enclosing some material on the subject of communism you may like to read.

My Dear Mr. Hoover:

○ I have just finished reading your book, Masters of Deceit, an experience which should happen to every American. It is a fine book, and one which might well be used as a text book in classes to the youth of the country as a true insight into the Communist mind. If there had been such a book as yours twenty years ago in the schools I am very sure the situation in this country, which is so frightening to all Americans, would not have reached the intensity which it has.

Toward the end of the book I began thinking that perhaps you felt it was the time to outlaw the Communist Party. Realizing the book was originally published in 1958, I am most anxious to know what your views are on the subject three years later. It would seem to me at the moment we have the masses to fear which we might not possibly have had to such a degree three years ago, and you mentioned that if the Party goes underground, it is more difficult to handle the masses. With your integrity and reputation, a word from you should certainly start a movement to work toward doing just this, shortly.

May I be one of the millions to commend you upon your distinguished work and efforts to keep this country free. I shall look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Hoover:

I have just completed your excellent book "MASTERS OF DECEIT" and I wish to commend you on presenting the American public with a book which has been vitally needed. It presents the facts in a straight-forward manner that is easy to understand and fulfills its purpose of exposing the Communist party's motives and methods of achieving them.

I shall encourage people I know to read this book. I think it should be on all high school and college reading lists and perhaps made a part of the study program in classes in American Government. Also, I would like to suggest that your book be printed in newspapers featuring a chapter at a time. In this way, more people would have access to it and more would actually read it.

I am proud to be an American and cherish the freedoms and liberties we enjoy in the United States of America. I would like to congratulate you on your outstanding work as Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. I feel our country is safer with you guiding this important organization..

Dear Sir:

efp

We are a committee of 15 members representing the college Department of the Pomona First Baptist Church of Pomona, California, of the American Baptist Convention. Our committee name is the Social Action Committee and we hope to provide our department of over 200 active members between the ages of 18 and 25 with information on social affairs.

However, our main concern is with Communism and its rapid growth in the world and in our country. As we realize how easily Communistic ideas are seeping into our colleges, we want to take the first step of action by becoming better informed.

Your Masters of Deceit is already a reading requirement to becoming a member of this committee, but we are wondering if you might be able to provide us with more literature which would help us as college men and women to relate ourselves to the problem and to better uphold Democracy. Would it be possible to send us some "starter" literature in 15 copies each? If not, could you mail us a list of the available material from which we could select?

We are in earnest about this matter and we feel that Christianity can and will be one of the biggest factors to help bring the defeat of Communism. With our firm faith in Jesus Christ and knowledge of the enemy, we are sure we can help combat the defeat claims of Communism.

Thank you so much for your time and consideration.

Sincerely in Christ,

Dear Sir,

Today, as never before, our democratic way of life is threatened by the dark clouds of Communism. As a teen-ager I will soon become a part of the adult world and will, to a degree, be responsible for America's future. As a teen-ager my part isn't very great, but I would like your ideas as to what we, the teen-agers of America, can do to stop this moving agressor, Communism,

I am 16 years old and will be a junior in high school this fall session. Someday I hope to be in the Diplomatic Service or the C. I. A., but for now I'm merely an observer.

Also, Sir, if I sent a copy of your book, Masters of Deceit, would you mind autographing it for me?

Thank you for your kind attention and time.

Yours truly,

Dear [redacted]

Your thoughtful letter of August 9, 1961, with enclosure, has been received. I am most appreciative of your kind sentiments and expressions of confidence in my administration of this Bureau. My book, "Masters of Deceit," was intended as a basic text on communism, and I am pleased that you have found it beneficial.

I do want to assure you that I have no plans to retire at this time. My only desire is to continue to serve our Nation in my present capacity to the best of my ability.

Enclosed is some material on the subject of communism which may be of interest to you.

Sincerely yours,

J. Edgar Hoover

Dear Mr. Hoover:

I feel we owe you a letter of gratitude for the great job you have been doing in keeping our country free. Your book Masters of Deceit has done much to awaken the American people.

I hope that you will stay on the job as long as you possibly can in spite of your enemies.

I am attaching a letter that I sent to the President. May God help you in carrying on your fight to save America from the Communists.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Commander [redacted]

Your letter of August 9, 1961, with enclosure, has been received. I am most appreciative of your expressions of confidence in my administration of this Bureau.

Communism is the greatest single threat facing the freedoms we all cherish, and it is always encouraging to hear from those who have an awareness of this problem. My book, "Masters of Deceit," was intended as a basic text on this subject, and it is reassuring to know that it has been so favorably received by the members of your Bureau of Ships Company 11-16. I was so pleased to learn that a review of it would be presented before the members of your Company on August 14. I do regret that my heavy schedule of prior commitments precluded my being with you at that time, but I do want to thank you for your thoughtful invitation.

Enclosed is some material on communism which may be of assistance to you.

Dear Mr. Hoover:

SAN DIEGO, 33, CALIF.

You may be interested in the enclosed drill schedule card for our Bureau of Ships Company 11-16, US Naval Reserve. You will notice our 14 August meeting is a review of your greatly appreciated book "Masters of Deceit". Two of our Company members were so enthusiastic about the book they wanted to describe it to our membership.

Mr. Hoover, we Reservists and citizens appreciate the fine work you and your staff on the FBI are doing. Some of us feel yours is the last and perhaps only agency of the government we can trust. We are worried about the suppression of information on the rise of communism in government quarters and in the Department of Defense. How can we win against communism if facts are being withheld--if we are hampered in the communications from our top military leaders.

We hope you are enjoying your vacation in our greatly blessed city. You probably will have concluded your visit here by the night of 14 August, but should you have time on your hands that night and are still here, you would find a very warm welcome at our meeting.

BENEDICT OF NURSIA

Benedict was born in the city of Nursia in the year 480, four years after Odoacer had technically ended the long life of the Roman Empire. Having been sent to school at Rome, at the age of fourteen he fled that city and plunged into the wild hills finding a cave near a falls on the Anio, some fifty miles from Rome.

For three years Benedict made his home in that cave, at the very spot where Nero four centuries before had carried on his pagan orgies.

As in the case of many an ascetic, the good name of a holy man attracted the visitor, and after three years of the solitary life of the hermit Benedict was besieged by patrician and barbarian alike. The Goths cleared away the brushwood, the brambles and the briars and Benedict lived for years in his cell at Subiaco, finally leaving at the request of neighboring monks to take charge of a small monastery at Vicovaro. Later he established on a high, rugged and desolate hill overlooking the Valley of the Liris, the monastery of Monte Cassino.

At Monte Cassino he led the neighboring peoples from paganism, cultivated the arid lands of the mountain, cleared the fertile lands below, built a monastery and oratories, practiced hospitality and wrote the Rule, which was to be the basis of the regeneration of the western world.

Pope Hormisdas was preparing for a new codification of the canon law. Dionysius, an Abbot in Sicily, was translating the Greek Councils for the Holy Father. Dionysius knew well the work of Benedict. There was no canon law particularly applicable to monastic life. The internal and external evidence indicates that the Pope called upon Benedict to write the Rule that would be the canon law for monastic life.

THE RULE OF ST. BENEDICT

Benedict was fitted to write the Rule, for he was thoroughly conversant with the monastic literature which rose from the east as represented by St. Anthony of the Desert, down through Jerome, Augustine, Basil, Cassian, Pachomius, Rufinus and others. He was, likewise, a keen student of Roman law as well as canon law.

Benedict recognized that the unit of human society was the family and that in the family was the common denominator of all nations, peoples, tribes, traditions, laws and customs. It made no difference what race, what nation, what climate or what status of civilization, the family was the unit of human society and the common denominator of all.

Benedict found this common denominator among the peoples of the world in the human family. The monks became, under the Benedictine Rule, a family, with the Abbot, father. This father was regarded as the representative of Christ. His spiritual sons worked with him for spiritual perfection. They were not to be ecclesiastical Robin Hoods, who took from the rich to give to the poor. They were not to beg, but to produce in the sweat of the face that wealth which would provide for themselves a sufficiency and for the poor a surplus.

Benedict wrote his Rule for the monasteries then existent. The emphasis was on three things: poverty, obedience and humility. Chastity was unmentioned because it was assumed in the very concept of the Christian family. The Divine Office was the rock upon which all was based. Benedict called the Divine Office the "Work of God" and ruled that nothing was to be preferred to it. Of vital importance were labor, moderation, and stability.

POVERTY

The monks were to dwell in poverty, because poverty excluded worldliness. Upon entering the monastery the monk gave up all his property and cut himself off from his patrimony. From that time on he owned personally no property whatsoever. He was to be shut off from the world, because Christ had taught: "If any man love the world, the charity of the Father is not in him."

OBEDIENCE

The vow of obedience was to be enforced. Today obedience is little understood. Without the Rule obedience would be intolerable slavery, but with the Abbots governing under the Rule, not capriciously or in self-interest or in passion, obedience was easy.

Obedience to Abbots who operated under law was merely a reflection of the Divine Life. The Abbot not only ruled under law but under God. He was the father of a family; hence he was entitled to obedience. To the monk it was Christ at the head of the table and to the ones who understood Christianity happiness was found in obedience, not in independence.

— The monastic unit was not a company under a commissioned officer. It was not a group of slaves under a despot. Rather it was a spiritual family, independent, autonomous and free, living under law and under a democratically elected Abbot.

HUMILITY

Humility is emphasized as well as obedience. The monks under obedience obeyed the Abbot. Under humility they obeyed their brother monks as well. The monk entered the monastery to sacrifice himself. He had answered the invitation: "Come follow Me."

LABOR

Labor was the law of the monastery. Benedict in his Rule emphasized both manual and mental labor. Labor was a strict obligation on the monks. Few men today can conceive of the place labor held in the monastery. To the Benedictine work and prayer were the two hinges on which the gate of Heaven would swing open.

MODERATION

In the earlier days of asceticism many monks so denied themselves that they ate only twice a week. They subjected the body to excessive punishment. They kept long fasts, wore filthy clothing, denied themselves sleep and outwardly to men practiced severe penances. In the moderation of St. Benedict the monk was to be well fed, both as respects the quantity and quality of food. His clothing was warm, clean and suitable. When on occasion he went out from the monastery into the world the clothing was to be clean, dignified and well-fitted. Sufficient sleep was demanded under the Rule, sleep from seven to eight hours a day.

There was, likewise, moderation in labor, whether manual or intellectual, and in prayer, whether public or private. In contrast to the ascetic, the Benedictine Rule dictated short prayer, yet most careful attention to the Divine Office.

STABILITY

The monk took a special vow of stability. He was to remain with his monastery for life, except in those cases, of course, where he chose or was chosen to join a band to start a new monastery.

Stability was impressed upon him throughout the novitiate and he came to understand that his economic, social and religious security were rewards for his vow of stability.

BENEDICTINISM A MEANS

Nothing in Benedictinism was an end unto itself, except the spiritual aim: "Let God be glorified in all things." This was the spirit of the Rule and the motto of the Order.

There was no art for art's sake in a Benedictine monastery. Painting and sculpture, the staining of glass and the writing of music, were all simply means of reminding men of God and His saints and the praises due them.

The collection of libraries and the copying of manuscripts were practical means for the wider use of the scriptures and the ancient writing.

The building of cathedrals had no architectural aim, but the architecture of those cathedrals had a spiritual aim.

Thus in the phases of monastic life, under the Rule, nothing was an end unto itself except THE SAVING OF THE SOUL.

THE RULE

Nine chapters of the Rule are devoted to the Abbot, twenty-nine are devoted to the monks; thirteen to the worship of God, ten to the internal administration and the remaining twelve to miscellaneous subjects.

Benedict adopted the concept of the Christian family, with the power of the father modified by the responsibility for the souls of his children. There was the requirement that in all things the Abbot must seek the advice of the monks. In concerns of general interest to all, all were consulted. In concerns of special interest, those particularly gifted were consulted. The Abbot was under no responsibility to accept the advice given him, but seek that advice he must.

Historians of profane history have wittingly or unwittingly overlooked the contribution of the Benedictine Rule to democracy. Not only do we find in it an historic origin of pure democracy in the election of the Abbot, but we find both democracy itself and the modification of absolutism in the participation of the monks in the decision of the Abbot.

The Rule of Benedict was accepted by the Holy Father as written, probably between 523 and 526, and it became the law of monastic life from that time on. It was welcomed by the Pope at Rome, by an emperor at Constantinople, by a prime minister in Italy, by a metropolitan in Gaul and a canonist in Africa. This is exceptional testimony as to its universal appeal.

Before the end of Benedict's century Augustine led forty Benedictine monks into Britain and, following Augustine, monastery after monastery witnessed the growth of vocations that permitted St. Lawrence to serve as an Abbot at Canterbury, St. Justus at Rochester, St. Milletus at London, St. Paulinus at York, St. Birinus at Wessex, St. Chard in Middlesex and St. Felix in East Anglia. A hundred monasteries were established in Britain alone.

Following the conversion of England, the Benedictines entered Germany under St. Boniface, who established monasteries in Friesland, Alemannia, Thuringia, Bavaria and Mentz. Sturm, by the middle of the eighth century, had established monasteries in Prussia and Austria. In the first half of the ninth century St. Ansgar established monasteries in Denmark, Sweden and Norway. The work continued among the Croats, the Moravians, the Czechs, the Poles, the Wends, the Servians, the Bulgarians, the Khazars and the Russians, northward to Iceland and westward to Greenland. At the height of success there were thirty-five thousand separate monasteries under the Benedictine Rule.

THE REGENERATION OF THE WESTERN WORLD

So immediate was the acceptance of the Rule of Benedict that the entire organization of the monastic life was modified in accordance with the Rule. Then came vocations as never before experienced in the history of Christianity.

In honor of the Apostles, bands of twelve monks usually were sent out to found a new monastery. Almost invariably they established their home on a hilltop or mountainside. The memory of the sermon on the Mount influenced them. The memory of Monte Cassino affected the decision. Christ's own words were determinative: "You are the light of the world. A city seated on a mountain cannot be hid." In contrast to the cave in the valley of the ascetic, the monk chose the hilltop. In the work which was to come in civilizing the world, the followers of Benedict needed the perspective of the mountain top.

The Benedictines applied through sheer necessity all their mental and physical powers to make the wilderness productive. They cultivated the fields. About those settled and fixed monasteries, towns were built. Fulda, the monastery of St. Boniface; for example, was a wild and desolate spot in a vast solitude of forest. Nomads soon turned to the settled life of agriculture. Tribal life rotated about that monastery as, inside its walls, authority, law, justice, peace, charity and hospitality reigned. The rude pagan saw the contrast and inquired. He found within the sanctions of the spiritual life.

The monastery was built as a self-sufficing unit. Because the life was primarily religious, the church was the center of the plan and all else were appendages. Thus in England the cathedrals were built and around those cathedrals were the monastery buildings. In the years that followed the towns and cities grew up around those monasteries. Now we have many a volume on the "Cathedral Cities of England."

DIVISION OF SERVICES

The monastery had to provide not only the church, but living quarters for the monks and separate quarters for the Abbot. Because the monastery was the hospital of Europe, it had to provide for the sick, the insane, and the infirm. Because it was the poor house, it had to provide living quarters for the poor and the aged. Because it was the orphanage of Europe, it had to house the children. Because it was the hotel of Europe, it had to house the traveller. Because the children had to be educated, the monastery provided the schoolroom.

Within the enclosure was also the court around which the monastery buildings were circled. In the center of the court was a cross of stone. Around this cross the market and fairs were conducted. With the Benedictines it was Christ in the market place.

In medieval days the market places were open to all. The surplus goods of the monastery were placed on sale there. The Benedictine Rule demanded that the monastery goods be sold "below the market." The honest farmer, the artisan and tradesman brought their commodities and wares.

DIVISION OF LABOR

The Abbot, as chief executive, was in complete authority. In the event of the Abbot's temporary absence, a Prior ruled the monastery in his place. The Chanter naturally was in charge of the music. He trained the choir and taught music to the young students. The Cellarer had charge of all the material goods. The Infirmarian was custodian of the sick, the aged, the infirm. The Almoner fed, clothed and housed the needy. The Hospitalier welcomed the guest and extended the monastery's hospitality to him. The Kitchener was in charge of the serving of all food. The Porter policed the doors, the Chamberlain cleaned the rooms and the Pages ran the errands. The Master of Novices directed the young men who were entering the religious life. The Bailiff was charged with order and discipline.

In addition were numberless trades: the cobbler and shoemaker, the barber, the cook, the baker, the brewer, the tailor, the spinner, the weaver, the wagoner, the shepherd, the for-ester, the miller, the cowherd and the keeper of the animals, poultry and bees.

In the monastic economy the Cellarer was the steward. Under the Rule of Benedict he was a sacristan, for all material things under his care were regarded as holy things. The tools and implements of the farm, the fabrics, furniture and ornaments were treated as sacred vessels.

The Almoner took his place at the monastery gate. The poor did not have to sit as they do today for endless hours on the benches of some welfare agency, later to be subjected to a third degree on their personal lives, treated as crooks and investigated to the point of criminal persecution. The Benedictine Almoner was at the monastery gate ready to hand to the poor their requirements. In fear and trembling the poor were received. Benedict of Nursia had remembered the words of Christ: "I was hungry, and you gave me to eat."

The poor man was received as if he were Christ at the gate.

The monastery met the world at the gate of its Almoner. It met the world in its poor. We ourselves dare not meet the poor. We no more dare meet them than we dare meet Christ. "Let Congress legislate, let the government spend large sums for relief purposes. We will take our chances in taxation." That is our own present attitude.

For six centuries the monastery of the Benedictine took care of all the poor, all the orphans, all the aged, all the widows, all the sick, all the infirm, all the insane who were thrown on the charity of the world. For six centuries the Benedictine monastery gave economic security, permanent employment and work for life with substantial provisions for hundreds of thousands of humble souls who worked within its monastery walls.

PLATO AND BENEDICT

Amid the eternal selfishness of man the monastery was an eloquent sermon. Plato had dreamt of a republic. Benedict was operating Christian democracies throughout the confines of the old Roman Empire.

When Benedict wrote his Rule there was not a Christian nation within the confines of the old Empire. Saints had abounded before Benedict, yet there had been no regeneration of society. Benedict placed Christian influence on the throne. At the height of Benedictinism, thirty-five thousand separate monasteries dotted Europe and conversions had included fifty queens, forty-seven kings, twenty emperors and ten empresses. Practically two hundred million souls were Christian.

Plato had planned an ideal republic. None was produced. Justinian had codified law, yet had healed no social wounds. Orator and writer had combatted heresy, yet where they wrote or preached Vandal or infidel quickly followed in possession of their territory. But throughout the old Roman Empire, the Benedictine Rule prevailed. Roman in character, barbarian in vigor, it had proven its practicality in teaching the moral life to nations.

FEUDALISM AND THE MONASTERY

Soon after Benedict had given his Rule to the world came the rise of the feudalistic state. Under the feudal theory the social organization was predicated on land tenure. Lords received their wealth primarily from the tilling of the manorial lands and from animal husbandry carried on by the serfs, who were theoretically free in person but whose labor was attached to the soil.

Side by side with the feudal manor was the Benedictine monastery. The choicest of land belonged to the manor and the poorest to the monastery. The land of the manor was worked by a serf, bound to the soil through strict legal and social obligation. The land of the monastery was worked by the monks, but the monk had a conception of obedience and of labor that made his day's work unusually productive.

The old feudal system has long since passed away. In its place is the harsh successor of modern capitalism. Occupying the choicer lands, its productive power is still unchallenged. The serfs of old are supplanted by the modern industrial machine. The surplus of production is still siphoned off by a military machine wholly disproportioned to the wealth produced. There is needed anew the Rule of Benedict to administer adjacent lands whose productivity will supply the needs of those thrown, whether by birth or adversity, on the charity of the world.

SOME CONTRIBUTIONS OF MONASTICISM

Full appreciation of Benedictinism is as difficult as full appreciation of Christian civilization itself. For six centuries there is no record of a monastery conducted under the Rule of Benedict ever having failed, though hundreds were destroyed.

The early Bendictines fed the hungry, gave drink to the thirsty, clothed the naked, ransomed the captive, harbored the harborless, visited the sick and buried the dead. These were the corporal works of mercy practiced in season and out of season wherever Benedictinism flourished under the Rule. The Rule commands these works by name in chapter four, entitled: "Instruments of Good Works."

Early Benedictinism gave to Europe the three-field system of agriculture. It contributed the staining of glass, the illumination of the manuscript, the development of music, Gothic architecture, schools and all the progress made in craftsmanship which distinguished the thirteenth from the sixth century.

... Living in Christian family life—whether in the east at Byzantium, or to the south where the Carthaginian once ruled, whether among the Goths, the Franks, the Vandals, in Greenland, Iceland or among the Teutons, the Huns, the Slav or Magyar or the Czechs—the little Benedictine family used the natural norm and character of family life to sweep aside all distinctions of race, language, religion, art, manner, customs, and cultures. Using this natural human family as the common denominator among all nations, tribes and people, it succeeded in superimposing upon human society the beneficent influences of Christianity, in inculcating a respect for lawful authority, a love of peace, a bond of charity and a complete regeneration of the world from the depths of barbarism and paganism to the heights of true civilization.

Bossuet described Benedictine monasticism as follows: "This Rule is an epitome of Christianity, a learned and mysterious abridgment of all the doctrines of the Gospel, all the institutions of the Holy Fathers, and all the counsels of perfection."

THE DECLINE OF WESTERN MONASTICISM

"Commendam" is the single word that accounted for the destruction of the monasteries. King, cardinals, emperors gave laymen and favorite prelates the rich benefices of the abbeys.

Western monasticism failed when the whole concept of Benedict became perverted. The secret was lost. The pattern and model of Christ's life was lost. Men faced the new learning or Renaissance without spiritual discernment. The old natural activities which were the means to the supernatural, now became ends and not means. Art became art for art's sake.

The simple monastic schools gave way to the proud universities where contentious debate and deep erudition replaced the real educational values of labor, prayer, charity and obedience.

Robbed of the fruit of their labor, the monks were soon taught to beg rather than to produce. Abbots, far from governing under the Rule of Benedict, frequently were laymen who never looked at the Rule, but directed from afar, in caprice, in self-interest, arbitrarily and unreasonably.

Spiritual values became less and less emphasized because there was no father to the family and monks naturally stepped from the moderation of Benedict to an inordinate emphasis, sometimes on a corporal work of mercy, sometimes on a spiritual work of mercy. In fact individualism became the sine qua non of religious life.

Above all, the old idea of hospitality was forsaken, and naturally so. With the father absent and with the monasteries being looted by their rulers who could invite guests?

When western monasticism forgot the Rule of Benedict, Europe simply prepared the way for the Reformation.

Benedict of Nursia, Leo XIII, Pius X, Benedict XV, Pius XI and Pius XII faced identical problems in the task of the regeneration of human society. Particularly does the Pontiff, Pius XI, say: "The world has nowadays sore need of valiant soldiers of Christ, who strain every thew and sinew to preserve the human family from the dire havoc which would befall it were the teachings of the Gospel to be flouted, and a social order permitted to prevail, which spurns no less the laws of nature than those of God."

The stone left unturned is the stone of Benedictinism. Under it the world will find a Rule. Fourteen centuries ago that Rule was written. Its principles are postulated on the precepts of the Gospels. Its instrumentality is the Christian family, living enclosed within monastic walls obediently under the Abbot, father. Stability is represented by the vow to remain there until death.

Hospitality is practiced. Within the enclosure Christ is host to, and not the guest of kings. The pagan and the infidel accept the hospitality. They observe the virtues of Christian family life. They inquire concerning the guiding principles underlying the practices they see. Naturally they inquire the aim and object. They too see the lepers cleansed, the sick cured, the blind made to see and the poor having the Gospel preached to them.

"Age gives way to age," says Pope Leo XIII, "but the events of one century are wonderfully like those of another. When society is perishing, the wholesome advice to give to those who would restore it is to call it to the principles from which it sprang. To fall away from its primal constitution implies disease, to go back to it recovery."

APPLICATION

This little pamphlet is written as a layman reads the Rule of St. Benedict and the Encyclicals of the Popes. It simply suggests that as once Europe was on the brink of ruin, so today the world is on the brink of ruin. Under the Rule, thirty-five thousand independent monasteries, large and small, autonomous and pure democracies, changed the face of the world as they served two hundred million people.

In our own beloved America there are three thousand odd counties awaiting the civilizing influence of three thousand Benedictine monasteries. We have one hundred thirty million people. Seventy million profess no church affiliation. The Catholic Church has penetrated about sixteen percent. Four hundred and ten other denominations are listed.

Europe has 220,000,000 Catholics out of 474,000,000 people; Asia has 7,000,000 out of 1,012,000,000 people; Africa 2,000,000 out of 143,000,000 and Oceania 1,500,000 out of 8,500,000 people.

It makes no difference in the world whether the Benedictine monastery is planted in the wilds of America, in a waste place of Japan, in some desolate spot of China, on some river in India or in darkest Africa. The supernatural is attainable through the natural. The family still is the common denominator of all races, all cultures in every clime. The scheme of things as laid down by Benedict of Nursia is as acceptable today as it was in the year he wrote the Rule—fourteen centuries ago.

Dear Sir:

I and many of my close friends here in the Phoenix area would like to take this opportunity to let you know of the warm cooperation we have received from your Phoenix director, Mr. Ed. L. Boyle. He has provided us with consultation when we have needed it and with a great deal of literature for general distribution. He is the type of man we have a right to be proud of.

I had the privilege of constructing a large 9 foot three section display on the general subject of "Getting informed about Communism". This display is being passed around the Phoenix Area now and we have passed out around 500 each of these books of yours.

1. One Nations Response
2. God and Country or Communism
3. Red, Gods and Christian Ideals
4. God or Chaos

We could have passed out more, but we believe we took all of Mr. Boyles stock, and are currently holding the display until he obtains more literature from you. His request may be pending with you now. This display has already been at the Motorola defense plant at which I work for 2 weeks and will be transferred to our two additional plants in the city as soon as we receive more literature. The response to the entire project has been overwhelming, for which we are very pleased. You surely must realize that in this day, your word is practically the only gospel truth on which we can depend. The words of most others must be examined thoroughly.

ITC ltr 8-17-61
We understand that your 1962 Report to the Appropriations committee also contains some very educational material and I would like to ask for just as many of these as you feel you can spare. We feel we can place them all in responsible hands. We will be willing to pay costs on all or any part of this material if necessary.

We are giving away and selling your book Masters' of Deceit as fast as we can get them. Enclosed is a clipping of what they are doing in Illinois which we thought might interest you.

May you continue to lead us through these trying days.

Sincerely yours,

'Menace That Threatens Our Future'

... J. Edgar Hoover

More than 1,000 persons in Effingham county have read — or are reading — "Masters of Deceit" as a result of the women's committee citizenship project. Glen A. Percival, county secretary of organization, and Mrs. Walter Heiden, women's committee chairman, unpack books in the Farm Bureau office.

Effingham Women's Committee Spotlights Dangers of Communism

WHAT can I do about communism?

Effingham County Farm Bureau women's committee has found an answer to that question. They are heeding the advice of J. Edgar Hoover, Federal Bureau of Investigation chief, who stressed, "Every citizen has a duty to learn more about the menace that threatens his future, his home, his children, the peace of the world."

And the Effingham county women's committee is using Hoover's book, Masters of Deceit, to learn the extent of this threat — both within our borders and beyond.

The book presents an analysis of the Communist party and outlines the threats of communism in America. It describes communist espionage and sabotage activities.

Masters of Deceit is a guide for persons interested in studying the communist threat.

"It's our job to understand communist tactics," agreed Mrs. Walter Heiden, Effingham women's committee chairman. "We don't expect to come in direct contact with a lot of communists, but we certainly want to be able to recognize any Red influence or infiltration. It is our obligation as American citizens to learn to spot deceptive communist fronts."

Interest in the project stemmed from the Freedom Bookshelf phase of the county's citizenship program. Masters of Deceit is on the list of books recommended for the bookshelf.

During a citizenship talk at a meeting of all Effingham

1961 Resolutions Committee

First major event slated for the new IAA building in Bloomington was a meeting of the 1961 tentative resolutions committee.

Thirty-one members form the committee which will determine farmers' views on matters of concern to them. First meetings were to be July 6-7. Additional sessions will be held July 24-25 to lay groundwork for the tentative resolutions to be presented at the next IAA annual meeting in St. Louis, November 13-16.

Edwin J. Gumm, IAA vice president from Galesburg, will be the committee chairman for the fourth straight year. Gumm is familiar with the process of sifting through suggested resolutions—submitted by farmers from throughout the state—and determining which issues should be carried to the voting delegates.

Here are members of the 1961 tentative resolutions committee:

County Farm Bureau district representatives: Dale Noe, McHenry county president, Marengo; Lloyd V. Berryman, JoDaviess county, Scales Mound; Joseph Slaymaker, Whiteside county president, Erie; Harold B. Steele, Bureau county president, Princeton; Clarence Mack, DuPage county president, West Chicago; Walter Anderson, Iroquois county president, Sheldon; Harry D. Iliff, Marshall-Putnam county president, Minonk; John W. Curry, Knox county vice-president, Victoria; Harold Mealiff, Adams county president, Mendon.

Floyd LeSourd, Mason county president, Topeka; Kenneth Gorden, Christian county vice-president, Blue Mound; H. A. Linville, Vermilion county president, Fairmount; Paul R. McClure, Jasper county president, Newton; Fred C. Mattes, Fayette county president, Vandalia; Charles C. Losch, Madison county president, East Alton; Kenneth R. Kamper, St. Clair county president, Freeburg; D. M. Garrison, Hamilton county president, Dahlgren; H. H. Barlow, Gallatin county president, Shawneetown. IAA Board Members: Edwin J. Gumm, Knox county, chairman, Galesburg; Merle Jeffers, Vermilion county, Catlin; Clarence McCauley, Jefferson county, Mt. Vernon; Milo Miller, Tazewell county, Pekin; Vernal C. Brown, McDonough county, Vermont; Wilbert Engelke, Madison county, Granite City; Russell Lamoreux, Carroll county, Lanark; Boyce Moore, Morgan county, Jacksonville.

Women's Committee Members: Mrs. Loren Johnston, Knox county, Altona; Mrs. Dale Gammon, Clay county, Louisville; Mrs. W. F. Neumann, Rock Island county, Milan.

Young People Committee Members: Merle Miller, DeWitt county, Clinton; and Lynn Truckenbrod, LaSalle county, Mendota.

An Editorial

Hogs Get Ulcers

ULCERS, believe it or not, constitute a new and serious affliction in hogs, says the Farm Journal. Outbreaks so far reported have been found only in hogs on rations reinforced with additives containing biologies, the new wonder drugs that have become so popular.

At Iowa State University, according to Herman Aaberg of the American Farm Bureau Federation, it has been found that feeds with large amounts of Vitamin "A" added did not do well, and some developed blindness. They also found a way to correct the trouble: Just add another chemical to offset the Vitamin "A".

These developments remind me that Dr. E. V. Askey, president of the American Medical Association, said in a public speech that one of the diseases afflicting the American people is "vitamania." People suffering from it are "crazy about vitamins."

Just where are we in this matter of food and feed additives? Maybe we should ponder over the words of Abraham Lincoln in his House Divided speech: "If we could first know where we are, and whither we are tending, we could better judge what to do about it."

The entire subject of additives is brought into focus by Dr. W. A. Billings, former extension veterinarian at the University of Minnesota, in the Poultry and Egg Weekly, as follows:

"Before the days of integration, farmers actually used to raise quite a few turkeys right on the ground. The flock was corralled in a fine, green and juicy alfalfa pasture. Here they gamboled in the bright sunshine and, besides the alfalfa, had free access to all the corn and other farm grains they could stuff. I have grave doubts that many turkeys suffered from vitamin shortages."

The whole business probably proves rather clearly that, as a people, we tend to overdo in all things, and that we are preoccupied with nostrums of every sort. The craze for tranquilizers is one of the latest and most glaring examples. We violate basic health rules, and then hunt for nostrums to avoid paying the penalty.

The cigarette addict, fearing lung cancer but reluctant to give up the satisfaction he gets from smoking, uses filters to keep the harmful substances from his lungs. Then he probably finds that it takes two to equal one non-filter cigarette, and he smokes more. Like a bird chasing its tail, he goes around in a circle.

This capacity for self-delusion seems evident in our national policies too. The federal government pays farmers to take land out of production to reduce surpluses; and also pays farmers to bring new land into production by reclamation and drainage. It encourages us to produce more by paying us to put on more limestone and fertilizers.

In international affairs, we preach fair trade policies and then resort to quotas, embargoes, and peril points to hinder trade. We price our products out of foreign markets, then subsidize the exporter to enable him to sell at world prices.

One restriction calls for another. We delude ourselves into thinking that we can have our cake and eat it too; but in the end we are shocked and dismayed to find that the means employed are little more than legislative legerdemain—hocus-pocus that fools nobody except ourselves.

John J. Lacey

a public relations for agriculture feature

Perfect Patrons Participate, Provide, Promote

By MELVIN E. SIMS

President, Illinois Farm Supply Company

(Editor's Note: Melvin E. Sims appeared on programs throughout the state promoting the Cropland Adjustment Program. His remarks were so well received that they are reprinted here. His subject is one concerning relationships inside the Farm Bureau family — perhaps our most important public relations consideration.)

TODAY'S challenge is tomorrow's salvation. I like to be optimistic. They say that the optimist and the pessimist usually end up at the same place, only the optimist has more fun getting there.

Let's take a look at where we are today as far as our farm organization and our co-ops are concerned. I think we will find our organizations are taking on the character of mature organizations. Early organizers are now passing the leadership to the next generation — each generation must prepare for its own future.

Present leadership and potential leadership have never experienced the absence of an organized agriculture. There was the little boy who came home from school with the black eye. Many of us have not had to fight for the things we have. Instead of learning of a new law by feeling its pinch, we hear about its being proposed and have an opportunity in shaping its character and ultimate disposition.

As we as individuals become more mature and grow in wisdom, we become more complacent, more conservative, more self-satisfied, and probably more resistant to change. Organizations, in general, may have the same tendencies — especially if they have enjoyed success.

People tend to become engrossed or buried in administration of present programs rather than seeking and launching out in new dynamic programs. Farm Bureau and our family of organizations may be subject to criticism in this area, especially by those who have not been kept completely informed.

Farmers are experiencing economic trouble. Some of us have been forced to seek off-farm income, some of our wives have sought employment as an additional source of income, some of us have enlarged our operations and assumed more risk, some of us have tightened our belts and worked longer and longer hours in a drastic effort to survive — hardly any of these have added to our happiness. What has caused this economic depression for farmers?

There are many who subscribe to the theory that technological advances have increased our ability to produce much more rapidly than our population has increased, resulting in surpluses and low farm prices. It is a fact that the production per worker on the farm has doubled in the past 20 years. Long-term, increased efficiency per worker benefits all of society. It puts a very real and serious bind on those being replaced.

Some place the blame on government — but for very diverse reasons. One group maintains that price supports have been too high and resulted in surpluses — the proof of surpluses is not difficult. Others claim that the farmer is in trouble because price supports are too low. Some are unwilling to assume the responsibility associated with being a member of a free society in a capitalistic democracy in solving our problems.

It is recognized that we are living in an economy which is regulated to a certain extent — for instance, the artificially high wage demands that organized labor demands and sometimes receives. Many factors have combined to drive up the price we pay for the production goods and services which are required.

It is a fact that the prices we receive for our production has not gone up in proportion to the prices we pay. In fact, some of our selling prices have decreased. Therefore, some argue that our inability to bargain on a more equal basis with highly organized industry and labor results in our economic squeeze.

Some blame the packer, the middle man, the processor, the giant food chain, the big farmer, and even Metrecal. One individual, in whom I have much respect, says that we do not have a farm problem, but rather, farmers with problems. There are many different ways of looking at it.

Whether it be a farm problem or farmers with problems, and whatever the reason may be, farmers in general are not receiving the income they desire or have a right to expect, and are therefore unhappy. The year 1959 and, to a lesser degree, 1960 have contributed to this unrest.

County Farm Bureau committees in winter. Farm Bureau President Kenneth Klarman discussed several facts compiled by Hoover. The information tied in directly with the women's committee bookshelf project.

Klarman has a personal interest in citizenship activities. He won the statewide Farm Bureau citizenship essay contest last year. In 1959, Effingham county won a first place for citizenship activities.

Farm Bureau women decided the book should be on the "must read" list of all Farm Bureau committee members. With the cooperation of the Farm Bureau board the women's committee obtained 36 copies of Masters of Deceit — one copy for each member of the County Farm Bureau's various committees.

Members of the committees soon were encouraging their friends and neighbors to read the volume. Interest in the book snowballed. The supply of books in the county dropped behind the demand. Copies were not available in quantity in southern Illinois.

Other groups — civic clubs, schools, and churches — became interested in the book and wanted copies.

So the women's committee decided to provide copies of Masters of Deceit as its No. 1 citizenship project this year.

During the past two months the committee ordered 450 paperbound copies from a New York book supplier. The books were made available in Effingham through the Freedom Bookshelf on a 30-day loan basis. Emphasis was put on circulating the books to the greatest number of persons.

Many decided to buy copies to add to their personal book shelves.

A sociology class at Effingham's St. Anthony's school obtained 100 copies — these were used in class and distributed to other pupils and to interested parents.

A Future Farmers of America chapter at Teutopolis obtained 50 books and set up a lending library patterned after the Freedom Bookshelf at the Farm Bureau office. Some of the books were placed on sale in the Teutopolis business area — at the post office, a barber shop, and a general store.

Effingham county women's committee members left copies in the waiting rooms at eight doctor offices and six dentist offices in Effingham.

Several civic groups sent representatives to the Farm Bureau office to pick up copies for their members. Farm Bureau women arranged for copies to be put on sale at an Effingham drug store and at a furniture store.

"Our Farm Bureau office is now serving as a clearing house for anti-communist books and materials," Glen Percival, Effingham county secretary of organization, explained. "We have ordered other books to help in our fight against communism."

"We are preparing an outline of books and pamphlets on the communist menace. This outline will be available shortly. We hope other county women's committees realize the need for a determined effort to have all our citizens understand communism and how it threatens all of us."

"A boast made by Lenin a number of years ago serves to remind us that this communist threat is not fantasy," Percival continued.

"Lenin told the communist plan of attack: 'First, we will take Eastern Europe. Next, the masses of Asia. Then we shall encircle that last bastion of capitalism, the United States. We shall not have to attack. It will fall like an overripe fruit into our hands.'"

Percival commented, "When we look at the world situation, we see the dangers of communism close to home. Apathy can be our downfall."

He summarized, "What we do in Effingham county may have little effect nationally but we hope to set an example for other counties to follow."

Dear Mr. Hoover,

When one prays for a person over a long period of time, one feels close to him. That is why you are not a stranger to me.

I want you to know how grateful I am for all the years of unselfish devotion you have given to the job of ferreting out Communists, in our churches and in youth groups, particularly.

Your department's surveillance of Communists in all walks of life has at least postponed the day of their takeover, which eventuality I am not granting them.

O I have read, recommended and given to others your book "Masters of Deceit" and have found it covers the subject so thoroughly one does not really need other books on the subject.

The ugly rumors we hear now of a concerted move to replace you drives home with great force the fact that our present administration is being used by the Communists for their own purposes. An administration which truly represented the people of the United States would be protecting you in your job!

I pray that we can yet divert the tragedy that your loss to us would be, May God and His Blessed Mother watch over you and bless you!

Sincerely,

I can understand your concern about communism, and your desire to take active measures in opposing it is indeed reassuring. My book, "Masters of Deceit," was intended as a basic text on this subject, and I am pleased that you have found it beneficial.

It has always been my belief that a broad knowledge of the objectives and operations of the communist conspiracy is essential if Americans are to effectively resist its influence. Armed with this understanding, they will be able to detect the communists as they attempt to infiltrate every segment of our American life.

[redacted] Postmaster, Reedville, Virginia, advised SA [redacted] on August 18, 1961 that [redacted] resides with her parents, [redacted] and [redacted] at Fairport, Virginia, and received their mail from Reedville, Virginia. [redacted] stated that [redacted] is a waterman and sells fish at wholesale; that his business is very poor and he is an individual of poor financial circumstances. [redacted] stated that the [redacted] are honest, reliable and enjoy a good reputation in the community in which they reside.

[redacted] advised that he would consider the [redacted] to be loyal to the United States.

[redacted] President, Peoples Bank of Reedville, Reedville, Virginia, advised SA U. LEROY SWEENEY on August 18, 1961 that he has been acquainted with [redacted] and his family for many years; that the [redacted] family is an old family which originated from some of the first settlers in this country who settled in Northumberland County. [redacted] stated that [redacted] is a member of the branch of the [redacted] family which never prospered due to a poor educational background. [redacted] stated that [redacted] is a waterman and has a poor wholesale fish business in that area. [redacted] advised that [redacted] wife works part-time as a saleslady of housewares for the Stanley Company. [redacted] advised that the entire [redacted] family are individuals who are honest, reliable and loyal to the United States. [redacted] advised that [redacted] is an individual of poor financial circumstances, and even though he enjoys a good reputation in the community in which he resides, he would not be considered a leading citizen in that community due to his poor financial condition. [redacted] advised that even though [redacted] is in poor financial condition, his credit is considered satisfactory in that community.

W. H. SHIRLEY, Sheriff, Northumberland County, Heathsville, Virginia, advised SA [redacted] on August 18, 1961, that he is acquainted with [redacted] his wife and daughter, [redacted] SHIRLEY stated that the family enjoys a good reputation in Northumberland County, and they have never been in any difficulty with law enforcement officers.

SHIRLEY stated the the [redacted] reside at Fairport, Virginia, and are individuals who live under very modest circumstances. SHIRLEY stated that the [redacted] family is an old family in that area dating back to the settlement of Northumberland County by the English; however, the [redacted] who live in Fairport, Virginia, are considered to be the branch of the family which has never prospered and are not very highly regarded by other citizens in the community due to their lack of material wealth.

The Trial Justice records of Northumberland County as maintained by the Clerk of the Circuit Court, Heathsville, Virginia, were examined by SA [redacted] on August 18, 1961, and failed to reflect an arrest record for [redacted] or [redacted]

Dear Sir:

A [REDACTED] who I am representing in certain labor litigation has expressed interest in the use of a well phrased paragraph in your book, Master of Deceit, beginning at the middle of page 136 to the end at page 137.

As he is a prolific letter writer it is my impression that the paragraph would be used in varying letter publications most of which he has mimographed; it would not be otherwise a more formal publication.

Please direct any reply to [REDACTED] at 519 Chandler Street, Danville, Illinois.

for the full description which I do not have other than it was the paper back edition of your publication.

Thank you.

Sincerely, [REDACTED]

VAD:

Being perturbed over the following items, probably because I can't check same out myself I am sending you the following notes of which data [REDACTED] is unaware.

1. 1955 GE, Danville, Illinois plant strike had a dynamite phase which sticks were removed by city police and thence to the Vermilion County courthouse according to rumor. About 36 hours after some explosives were moved from the courthouse a county highway official was killed in DuPage or Cook County after tripping over a dynamite trip wire on his front lawn in 1957 or 1958 at a time certain road contracts were being investigated. Whatever was moved was done by the then probation officer now sheriff and a former member of the then sheriff's office now believed in Louisiana with the federals in some capacity.
2. GE of UAW or IAM affiliation or link possibly with Drake Hotel doorman on duty days the week of July 4, 1959 as to disappearance of [REDACTED] who heard a Shank vs. GE case the fall of 1959 which was the fall before his disappearance.

Dear [redacted]

Your letter of August 19 has been received.

I can understand your concern about communism, and your desire to acquire additional knowledge regarding the nature of this menace is most reassuring. My book, "Masters of Deceit," was intended as a basic text on communism, and I am pleased that you have found it beneficial.

Although I am not in a position to recommend specific books to you, I would like to suggest that you should be able to find a wide variety of reading matter on this subject at your local public library. I am enclosing some literature which may also be of assistance to you in this regard.

Sincerely yours,

J. Edgar Hoover

Dear Mr. Hoover:

I want to thank you for writing "Masters of Deceit" before I say anything else. Every phase of Communism, once vague and misunderstood (although mistrusted), is now clear and lucid. Heretofore, Communism was just a "natural" prejudice to me; now I know why it is to be despised. I thank you for this knowledge.

But, wanting to know more about Communism, I have written to them, at the address you gave in Part IV, chapter 10. I haven't received an answer yet, which is probably because I wrote only two days ago, but I'm anxiously awaiting it, particularly to see the constant shifting in the "Party line". I asked them for "pam-plets, leaflets, books, or otherwise" that explain and foster the principles of Communism. I told them, too, that I am a senior in high school (and I am), and am curious to know if I'll be invited to join their youth league. Any information that I get from them, of course, I realize will be of little value as far as truth and honesty are concerned.

There is, however, some more and other information I'd like. Such as, which organizations in the United States today are Communist, secretly or openly? Who are the top Communist leaders, particularly in my area? And what books, outside of "I Led Three Lives" by Philbrick and "This is My Story" by Budenz, the first of which I've read, the second of which I'm reading, would you recommend?

Again, thank you for "Masters of Deceit".

Dear [redacted]

I have received your letter dated August 18 and want to take this opportunity to thank you for your generous comments concerning my book, "Masters of Deceit." I appreciate your confidence in the value of the publication. It was written in the hope it would become an easy-to-read text for students and other Americans interested in learning more about the threat of communism.

It was good of you to afford me the benefit of your views and observations relating to the matter you discussed. Certainly, the students of today will shortly be confronted with major decisions in the struggle against this conspiracy to destroy the American heritage, and the effectiveness of their resistance will depend on their knowledge of the history, aims and methods of the communist movement.

In connection with your suggestion, you might like to know that this Bureau has already cooperated with the educational systems in some states in making available tapes on the subject of communism for use in their public schools.

Enclosed is some material which may be of interest to you.

Dear Mr. Hoover:

At long last, I have read your "Master's of Deceit". I just wish it could be used for a text for High School and College Students. It is so complete.

94-1-135-1763
People through out the United States are finally realizing the necessity of learning what Communism really means-- we 'hear' that Florida is requiring a course in communism in the curriculum and that Governor Rockefeller has signed a bill permitting like instruction.

The GREAT FEAR that the wrong instructors could have a field day brain washing our children and grand children, under our very eyes and without our knowledge, is uppermost in the minds of many of us.

It has occurred to me, and surely to others, that in this day of TV and Visual Education, that tapes properly geared for Junior High, Senior High and College Students could be made by none less than yourself, Mr. Hoover, and thus prevent any slanting or distortion in the presentation of the subject.

Any such attempt would then be evident even to the most naive student. This kind of an educational program could then be universal through out our country. A need for this kind of authentic education today is vital.

Most sincerely,

Your letter of August 25, 1961, has been received, and I want to thank you for your kind comments concerning my book, "Masters of Deceit."

With respect to your question as to what you can do to counter the communist threat, I have always encouraged our citizens to educate themselves to the true nature and methods of the communist movement in order that they may intelligently resist the zealous efforts of its adherents to destroy our form of government. This knowledge also helps to avoid the danger of confusing communism with legitimate dissent on controversial issues. We cannot use vigilante action or action outside the law in combating communism, and it is the responsibility of the people to report the facts to the proper authorities.

Enclosed is some literature on the general subject of communism you may wish to read.

Director F. B. I.

Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

In regards to the fight against communism, what can I do? I would greatly appreciate some literature, not State Department, etc. but that of the F. B. I., the only group that I can trust.

Masters of Deceit was an excellent book as an eye opener, now it time to give a book with some real additional names, facts, etc.

Cordially,

Dear [Redacted]

I have received your cordial letter of August 23, 1961, and I want to take this opportunity to thank you for the prayers and kind sentiments you expressed. It is indeed pleasing to read your comments regarding my book, "Masters of Deceit."

With respect to your question as to what you can do to counter the communist threat, I have always encouraged our citizens to educate themselves to the true nature and methods of the communist movement in order that they may intelligently resist the zealous efforts of its adherents to destroy our form of government. This knowledge also helps to avoid the danger of confusing communism with legitimate dissent on controversial issues. We cannot use vigilante action or action outside the law in combating communism, and it is the responsibility of the people to report the facts to the proper authorities.

I am enclosing some material on the general subject of communism you may wish to read.

Sincerely yours,

J. Edgar Hoover

Dear [redacted]

Your letter postmarked August 28 has been received, and the interest which prompted you to write is indeed appreciated.

I can understand your concern about communism, and the desire of you and your husband to take active measures in opposing it is most reassuring. My book, "Masters of Deceit," was intended as a basic text on this subject, and I am pleased that you have found it beneficial.

As a matter of long-standing policy, I have always refrained from furnishing recommendations concerning organizations and publications. It has always been my belief, however, that a broad knowledge of the objectives and operations of the communist conspiracy is essential if Americans are to effectively resist its influence. Armed with this understanding, our people will be able to detect communist efforts aimed at infiltrating every segment of our way of life. You should find a wide variety of literature on this subject available at your local public library, and I am enclosing some material which may also be of assistance to you in this regard.

Dear Sir:

Recently my husband proposed that we join a group organization designed for the prevention of communist infiltration within our community. Being employed with a local electronics firm provided me the opportunity to inquire directly with other civic-minded personnel already engaged in this type of activity. We have been advised that our first step is to join study-courses and read literature explaining the communism practice, so we can understand more readily the menace that endangers our country. We have begun by reading your publication; "The Masters of Deceit", a shocking exposition of the efficiency of the communists.

We are new to this battle, and lack society position or wealth for influencing factors. Yet, we want to do all that we can to aid our community and our country in this fight. We recognize that two of our most effective deterrents are: (1) Exercising our voting privileges, (2) Corresponding with state and national congressmen on important issues; but what other means could we employ to be more effective??

① If the communists have developed so efficiently within our communities, churches, and governments; is there something that the average American can do to either infiltrate their organizations or hinder their progress?

I realize that you are a very busy man with duties of much greater importance than replying to correspondence of this nature. However, if this inquiry could be referred to someone who would provide us with this information, I would greatly appreciate it. For I am of the opinion that if all Americans banded together in contributing of their talents, this world would be a better place.

REC-15 62-104277-22
The following is a list of questions which I have on this matter:
a) What type of publications could we purchase to keep us best informed on important matters?
b) What type of organizations should we join, which are not too expensive for membership and which are effective in combating communist growth?
c) What are some of the most effective things an average American can do within the framework of home, family, job, and community to discourage communistic activity?

Dear

It was indeed a pleasure to receive your letter postmarked August 29, 1961, and the interest you indicated in my book, "Masters of Deceit," is appreciated.

Communism thrives on apathy and indifference, and only through an aroused citizenry can effective measures be taken to thwart this threat to our national security. Your concern over the menace of communism is encouraging, and in response to your request, I am enclosing some material regarding this atheistic evil. These pamphlets set forth the general objectives of the Communist Party, and in them you will find some suggestions as to how a private citizen can combat this ideology.

Dear Mr. Hoover:

I am in the process of reading MASTERS OF DECEIT, and I want to know what I can do, in order to stop communism in our wonderful country.

I know that I am but one person, but I feel that I must offer my services in some way to stop the dread disease called communism. I have given much thought to this, and must confess I don't know how to start out on my campaign to help.

I would greatly appreciate an opportunity to speak up against this hated thing. Please, won't you tell me what I can do?

I am an Assistant Office Supervisor for The Prudential Insurance Company of America. I will be 23 years old on October 11.
I am single and live alone. I have a talent for writing and I want a chance to use that talent in our never-ending cold war. All I want is a chance to help. Could you please suggest some way that I could?

I am an American, and that fact alone makes me proud.
I want to help my fellow-Americans rid our country of these devils that would try to rob us of our pride. I know that many people feel that this job is for your F. B. I., who have men trained for work like that. I know that you don't have to train a person to be patriotic!

Please let me know what I can do to help. It will be greatly appreciated.
